Children to be Given Right Start

"What next?" is the question that thousands of bewildered children have been asking as school closed its doors behind them. An army of children between the ages of 14 and 16 years, says the children's bureau of the United States Department of Labor, march out of the schools each year to become wage earners. In pamphlet entitled "Advising Children on Their Choice of Occupation and Supervising the Working Child," received here yesterday by Mrs. Horatio B. Sweetser, Minnesota agent, the bureau tells what happens to the children who leave school early in life and offers suggestions for helping them get the proper start. Only a few children, according to the pamphlet, receive any help from their parents in finding suitable openings because parents do not know what opportunities are open to boys and girls, how to go about finding them, or what is the best thing for a child to do. The children begin an aimless search, making the rounds of factories, shops and offices and answering advertisements. More than nine-tenths of them go into "blind alley" jobs that require no skill and offer no opportunity to get ahead. Many drift from job to job, and become incapable of steady work. Some find work for which they are physically unfitted, sometimes to the permanent injury of their health. Some are without any employment for a time, since in many states the law does not require a child under 16 to have a job before he is excused from school. These conditions, the bulletin points out, call for some organization in the schools or in connection with the schools to tell children what and where the jobs are, and what training and ability are required to fill them. While most vocational guidance and placement work in this country has been started by private organizations, it has been taken over in a number of cities by the juvenile labor exchanges shows that the most successful work is done in close co-operation with the school. In Austria, where vocational guidance is now receiving special attention, a careful study is being made of how to link up the work with the school system. In school placement bureaus the child applying for work may be reached before leaving school and in many cases persuaded to remain, or provided with a scholarship to enable him to do so. In one city from 25 to 30 per cent of the children who come to the placement bureau are returned to school. The placement bureau in this country is a connecting link between the school room and the industrial or business world. It keeps in close touch with local industries and opportunities and helps to make school work more practical. The placement bureau endeavors to place the child in work for which he seems best fitted and which offers the most promising future, even if that means persuading him and his parents to give up a job that offers a higher wage at the beginning. It attempts to keep in constant touch with the child after he has gone to work in order to learn whether he has been suitably placed and to help him adjust himself. Although no general schemes have so far been devised in this country for supervising the child at work, the requirement in some states that a child must secure a new employment certificate each time he changes his job offers opportunity for an effective supervision.

Will Visit in Canada

Loretta Larsen, daughter of Mrs. Anna Larsen, left Saturday evening for Alberta, Canada, where she will spend the remainder of the summer. Miss Larsen will visit in Calgary, Halkirk and Banff, Canada's beautiful summer resort in the Canadian Rockies. She will return to Omaha in September.

Activities of Women

There never was a time when women played so important a part in big French business as they are playing today. In the economics department of the University of Texas the girl students are taught how to cook cheap meals. "To retain eternal youth," says Sarah Bernhardt, the famous French actress, "women should refrain from wearing corsets." Miss Adelaide W. Neall, a graduate of Bryn Mawr college, is one of the associate editors of the Saturday Evening Post. Women will hereafter be eligible to receive the Victoria Cross, one of the highest honors conferred by the British government. The sugar supply in New York has become so acute that the housewives of that state have appealed to President Wilson for relief. Miss Shirley Putnam, daughter of Herbert Putnam, librarian of congress, has become the editor of the Greenwich, Conn., Press. Mrs. James M. Cox, wife of the democratic candidate for president, was among the first women in this country to offer her services for war work. Lady Geddes, wife of the British ambassador to the United States, is an American, being the daughter of the late W. A. Roos of Livingstone, L. I. Yassar college students are making an extensive campaign to have Mrs. Elton H. Hooker nominated for governor on the republican ticket in New York. A new minimum scale for women experienced in professional and servant vocations of $16 per week and a part time minimum of 40 cents an hour has been promulgated by the industrial welfare commission of California.

Your Alarm Clock

An alarm clock can be used during the day as well as to help one rise early in the morning. When baking, set it as a reminder to look into the oven, if doing bits of work in another part of the house. This saves many a cake from scorching. Frequently if you have just a few minutes to lie down and relax set the alarm clock at the time you must go to work again. Also use the alarm clock in taking doses of medicine which come several hours apart. —July-August Good Housekeeping.

Lingerie Blouse Soon to Be Popular

First we discarded the lingerie blouse because of the high cost of laundry work and now we are warned that we shall have to take to the lingerie blouse because of the high cost of georgette and chiffon and silk and satin. So it is back to the washtub or washing machine. If we can't get good georgette or silk blouses at the price we can pay, then it is good sense indeed to get lingerie blouses instead. Not that they are actually inexpensive; far from it. You might think that this move toward economy in blouse buying was instituted by women of moderate means, but the contrary, it seems to have been the women of wealth who first began to rebel against the high cost of georgette and chiffon blouses. They it was who first began to revive the wash sort because they could not afford the other sort. The bank president's daughter decides that she simply cannot afford silk or georgette blouses for morning wear with her street or sport suit. It is outrageous. The cheaper sort of blouse doesn't wear and the more expensive is out of the question. But the bank president's least paid office girl continues to come to the office every morning in a transparent chiffon or georgette blouse.

And doubtless she wears silk stockings, too, though the bank president's daughter is registering her protest against the cost of silk stockings by wearing good quality tulle for mornings and expensive, though very durable, woolen ones for sport wear. But before long we will all come around to lingerie blouses again and we will have to find a solution to the laundry problem as best we can. After all, it is not an impossible trick to wash and iron a muslin or handkerchief linen or organdie blouse yourself. Doubtless the task of washing the georgette sort is simpler, for one needs no flatiron or ironing board for that, but then the lingerie blouse looks fresh after its last washing, just before it has to be discarded because it is so worn out, while the georgette blouse becomes less and less fresh. In the end it barely shows that it has been washed at all.

To Clean Wicker

Do not clean wicker or willow chairs with hot water or yellow soap. Dust the chairs carefully and then scrub with tepid water which contains a little kerosene. On unvarnished reed or willow furniture a solution of oxalic acid and water may be used. It will bleach natural wicker and make it look like new. If the seats of the chairs droop wash them in hot water and turn them upside down to dry in the sun. They will shrink into their original shape.

Phoenix Hose is a BETTER Quality

Cheap hose are only cheap in price. They prove expensive in the end. They last but a short time, and give only dissatisfaction for the price you paid.
