

KIMBALL CAN SEE NO USE FOR DOME ON NEW CAPITOL

Declares It Useless Piece of Ornament—Rejected Plans To Be Shown Here.

"What earthly reason is there for putting a dome on a state capitol?" demanded Thomas R. Kimball, professional advisor to the State Capitol commission, speaking yesterday afternoon at the opening of the exhibition of drawings submitted in the recent Nebraska state capitol competition.

"A dome is the most expensive and useless thing ever conceived to be placed on a building. There's only one in America that is beautiful and that is on the national capitol. It is beautiful by accident, for it slipped down seven feet into its socket and stayed there."

"I sometimes think a dome is merely an expression of the emptiness of the minds of the men who demand to have it."

"The winning drawing in the Nebraska capitol competition, by Bertram G. Goodhue of New York, presents not only the finest expression of a master artist in architecture but also the most for the money, the splendid shaft, 400 feet high, besides, will have an advertising value to this state that is incalculable. It will be most useful, also, in providing an inexhaustible space in this vertical column for storage of state records."

"This design expresses a new thought in American capitol architecture, I hope, will put an end forever to domes."

"It should be remembered, however, that the State Capitol commission has not yet adopted Mr. Goodhue's plan. It has merely selected him as the man. Whether his design is adopted for the new state capitol is to be decided in the future."

"He enters into a contract with the State Capitol commission to study the problem with the commission, the object being to get the best capitol for the state obtainable under present conditions."

The drawings and ground plans of the several plans submitted in the competition are on exhibition daily on the third floor of the city library.

The school of fine arts of the university is planning an exhibition of unusual interest at the state fair. In addition to the features of past years, arrangements are being made to have an exhibition of domestic architecture for villages and farms organized by the American institute of architects.

A number of exhibitions will be given in the university galleries by the school of fine arts during fair week. A painting of the Nebraska Art association will occupy the main gallery. In the smaller rooms the paintings of Dolph and Sherman will be on exhibition.

The demand for supervisors of drawing and music exceeds the supply. Many western towns and cities are realizing the importance of this work and are seeking expert help from the university. A strong tendency to organize applied music is manifest, hence supervisors of music who can conduct the work conscientiously and intelligently are especially in demand.

Dean Warren A. Seavey, newly elected dean of the college of law of the state university, held final conferences with Chancellor Avery and the law school faculty Thursday before he returned to his home at Bloomington, Ind. BOYLES AID TO EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE ALIKE

Omaha School Prepares Students to Help Business Men and Get Larger Salaries.

The best employer is the one who surrounds himself with the best workers, and the best workers are the ones who have given enough serious consideration to their future to thoroughly prepare themselves.

The employee with an understanding of the underlying principles of his business has a most decided advantage over the untrained worker. He has confidence in his ability to tackle each new problem that confronts him, he assumes more responsibility with the knowledge that he can carry the load. The better the position the heavier this load becomes, and with it a corresponding increase in the salary received.

Boyles colleges offer the young man or woman about to enter the world of business an unsurpassed training in business fundamentals, and these courses are prepared with the thought in mind that this training requires the shortest possible time consistent with completeness.

Boyles college is a member of the National Association of Commercial Schools, an organization for the protection of the student and a guarantee of the efficiency of the schools that have been accredited.

With the continuation of both the day and evening sessions throughout the summer months, Boyles college offers the solution of the business education problem for the man or woman already employed who cannot attend the day classes.

Midland College.

Midland college is not forgetting the boys this summer. Workmen are busy converting the lower floor of the Tower building into a rest and reading room for the men of the school and expect to have it completed by the opening of the fall term. They are also busy getting a number of other things ready for the opening of school and among them is a newly equipped classroom for biology in Clemens hall.

A very successful summer school will be completed August 5. The enrollment has grown well over the normal. The usual closing activities are being planned by the fine arts department. Miss Dorothy Whistler is getting the young ladies of the rhythmic movements and the playground classes ready for the outdoor program to be held on the campus on the evening of August 5.

The music department of Midland is closing one of the most successful years of its history. The teachers of the department are working night and day to accommodate the large number of students. Friday night, July 20, there will be a recital given by the summer school students of the vocal, violin and piano departments.

School starts September 13 in the regular college and preparatory departments. The commercial school will start its regular September 7. At least 100 freshmen are expected.

Dr. E. E. Stauffer and Dr. J. F. Krueger accepted in Fremont and spoke to the students in chapel.

A large painting entitled "Sunset," by Birge Sandes of St. Anthony college, Lindbergh, Kan., has been presented to the college.

You who are graduating from High School or Prep School—toward what goal does your ambition point? Do you lean toward a career in business or in one of the professions? Is it your intention to become an educator, a scientist, an agricultural expert? Do you plan to prepare yourself for the strenuous battle of life by thorough special training in any line? There has never been a time when such training was more essential, when its advantages were more apparent. We live in an era of transition and adjustment; in a world new-born after the cataclysm. Profound changes have been wrought. Trying times, and times of glorious opportunity, are just ahead. The University trained man or woman will approach these trials, these opportunities, equipped with sound training and sure knowledge. And in comparison with these advantages, the time, the effort, the money involved in securing such training will count as little.
