

COX REFUSES TO GET OFF PERCH ON BOOZE ISSUE

Wets Show Signs of Deserting Governor When He Refuses to Take Definite Stand.

BY ROBERT B. SMITH.

Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Leased Wire.

Columbus, O., Aug. 14.—Governor Cox again Friday indicated his determination to adhere to a policy of strict neutrality on the liquor issue.

When his attention was called to the statement of Chairman George White of the democratic national committee in New York Wednesday, the governor declined to make any comment or to signify his approval or disapproval in any way. Mr. White said Governor Cox was not a "beer and light wine candidate," but a "law enforcement candidate" and that the wets could interpret that in any way they chose.

Word reached Columbus today that "Mr. White's statement had caused considerable discontent among the governor's wet supporters, who thought it would seriously impair his chances of success in the large thirst areas of the country."

Once before when White told the country that the league of nations would not be the chief issue of the campaign it was made known that the governor had not authorized any such statement and the governor quickly repudiated it in his acceptance address. But if he felt any dissatisfaction over White's statement on the alcohol question, he was careful to permit no evidence of it to leak out. It is probable that he will be the White statement stand and keep as quiet as he can about liquor all through the campaign.

$30,000 in Booze Grabbed.

St. Louis, Aug. 14.—Whisky valued at $30,000 was confiscated when police raided a house here. Six men were held for federal authorities on charges of violation of the Volstead prohibition enforcement act.

Billy Sunday Turns Down Movie Job at Salary of $1,000,000

Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Leased Wire.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 14.—"God gave me my reputation and I intend to continue to give God my services," declared Rev. Billy Sunday today in explaining why he turned down a guarantee of $1,000,000 a year as a movie star.

A representative of one of the biggest film corporations visited Rev. Sunday at his Winona Lake home recently and made this offer, at the same time tendering a check for $50,000 to clinch the deal.

"I told him I couldn't hear him and that I would not commercialize the popularity God gave me by having my mug pictured and thrown on the screen," said Mr. Sunday.

Heart Secrets of a Fortune Teller

By RACHEL MACK.

I Teach a Stenographer That Looks Count.

I'm about as familiar with a typewriter as I am with a wireless telephone—and it's a sad but true fact that I wouldn't now a page of shorthand from a Chinese laundry sign. But, just the same, I'm not such a frost when it comes to offering the postgraduate course to shipwrecked stenographers.

Yesterday about closing time, Katie ushers in the most mallarin' female of the species. But when I get right down to facts and take inventory she isn't such a homely party after all. In fact she's got the features.

Suddenly I understand what the blight is: the awful clothes she's draped in—a durable, mud-colored dress and a weather-proof hat that would have been a liability to Venus herself! She looks like Weary Willie's twin sister all dressed up for a mushroom hunt.

"In trouble, girlie?" I ask by way of opening conversation. She nods her head to prove I'm a good guesser and starts the weeping act. Sounds of sniffing fill the atmosphere of my peaceful home.

"Love worries?" I suggest. Head nods in the negative and more sniffles.

"Business Troubles." "Yes," she sobs. "I'm out of a job."

"One of the most curable little ailments in the world," I say very encouragingly, "cheer up and let's have the details."

"Well," she says, still enveloped in gloom, "I'm a graduate of the best business school in town. I was one of the first ten recommended in my class for vacancies. They got me a good job, but— conversation again blocked by the weeps.

"But you lost it in record time," I finish. "Yes," she admits, "when they cut down the office force I was the first to go."

"Got your walkin' paper before you could show them how valuable you were? Pretty raw. What next?" "I went back to the business school and asked for another placement. They got me a new position and gave me a No. 1 recommendation."

"And job number two dies a natural death also?" I venture. "Yes," she says, "it did. After that I hadn't the nerve to go back to headquarters and tell them I had failed again."

"So you've been out on your own," I suggest, "acting as your own little employment agency! Any luck?"

"None!" she announces. "I've walked the streets till my shoe leather is wearing out, and it's the same old story at every office where I answer an ad: 'They's just employed a stenographer!' And generally," she says, fierce enough, "I know they are lying!"

"I shouldn't wonder, girlie," I says, kind but true, "such things happen in the best regulated offices."

"Then read my future," she begs, "and tell me what's in store for me."

"No, girlie," I says, to her everlasting surprise, "I'm not tellin' fortunes today. What you need is a little common sense talk and you're going to get it right now. Prepare for the personal inquiries:

"Question number one: do you consider yourself a good stenographer?" "I do," she announces. "I take dictation rapidly and I'm quick on the keys. I'm careful and a good speller."

"Some accomplishments!" I says. "Question number two: who discharged you from your two positions, and who refused you jobs all week—men or women?"

"Why, men, in every case," she says lookin' surprised.

"Sizes Up Purse." "Very well," I proceed. "Question number three: how much money have you got put away?"

"One hundred and seventy-five dollars," she says sort of nervous, "and I'm saving every cent of it for a rainy day."

"Exactly," I says, pleasantly. "And the rainy day has come. It's my duty to tell you that you're a frump."

"A WHAT?" she stutters, not believin' her ears. "A frump!" I repeat, "Capital F—m-p; meaning, according to my dictionary, a lady dressed like a comic valentine! Your clothes are the most unpleasant bunch of duds I've ever seen hitched together."

I see she's getting excited, but I motion her to keep quiet.

"Do you know why you lost your two jobs, and why you can't land another one? Simply because the men don't like your looks. What they all crave—whether they know it or not—is a neat, stylish female part of my money in a few clothes?"

"A regular, up-to-date little workin' trousseau!" I answers, "with a shampoo and a manicure thrown in. This note," I says scribblin' fast on one of my business cards, "is to be handed to the head saleslady in Simon's Ready-to-Wear. It calls for a blue serge suit with plenty of pep, six neat shirt waists, a nifty black sailor, tan walkin' pumps, and a supply of odds and ends to complete the outfit. I'd like to suggest that you present the clothes you are wearin' to the Salvation Army. They probably know of a worthy grandmother who could use them."

"To Doll Up." "Well," she says, "it seems rather extravagant, but I'm going to follow out the program. It's my only chance!"

"No chance about it, dearie," I in-

Looks Count Most.

"Do you mean to tell me," she asks very dignified, "that looks count more than efficiency?"

"Well," I says, "maybe looks don't count more, but they count first. After you've made yourself as necessary to the firm as the office furniture and the steel vault, you can afford to look like Mrs. Medusa, if you want to. But not before! Get me?"

"Yes," she says, "But it's a new idea. Do you advise me to invest

Big Crops May Bring Drop in Living Prices

Washington, Aug. 14.—Crop reports indicate somewhat lower prices for foodstuffs, according to the monthly bulletin of the United States Chamber of Commerce committee on statistics and standards tonight.

"Unless experience be misleading, the new purchasing power of the railroads will be a strong factor in maintaining both prices and the volume of business," the bulletin states, in commenting on the recent rate increases.

The automobile industry, the bulletin adds, "gives indications of approaching the peak of production for the present," while building operations are hampered by high

Legal Adviser to Lord French Wants to Resign

Dublin, Aug. 14.—The Freeman's Journal announced that E. Wylie, legal adviser to Viscount French, lord lieutenant of Ireland, has presented his resignation. Rather than accept it, the paper says, Andrew Bonar Law, government leader in the house of commons has promised to pledge the government on Monday to dominion home rule with full fiscal authority.

Of course, the newspaper comments, the question of Ulster will be subject to discussion.

D'Annunzio Soon to Declare Fiume an Independent State

Trieste, Aug. 14.—D'Annunzio has declared that the establishment of free and independent state of Fiume is imminent and he has planned to extend its confines along the so-called Wilson line of demarcation between Albanian and Jugo-Slav territory.
