

FIGHTING SHIPS AND RELIGION, YOUTH AND OLD AGE, WHILE THE WORLD'S CLOCKS TICK OFF THE DAYS

The U. S. S. Tennessee, newest and greatest of our superdreadnaughts, which was placed in commission at the Brooklyn Navy Yard recently. She is the equal of any fighting ship afloat.

As a token of appreciation for the men who so well served their country during the great world struggle, not only in military circles but also as leaders in philanthropy, civil administration and the church, the University of Columbia decided to confer on these leaders the highest academic honor that of Doctor of Laws. The distinguished persons who were so honored are shown here, next to right: General John J. Pershing, Commander in Chief of the A. E. F.; Admiral Snowden Sims, Commander of the Naval Forces in the waters; Bishop Charles Henry Brent, Chaplain-General of the American Forces; Henry F. Davison, Director of the American Red Cross; Herbert Hoover, American Administrator of Food Supply.

A recent portrait of Pope Benedict XV, who has rescinded the veto on official visits of Catholic sovereigns to the King of Italy in Rome. The act was fulminated by Pope Pius IX, just half a century ago as a protest against the overthrow of the civil principdom of the papacy.

Georgette and Suzanne Douset, nine and eleven years old respectively, photographed on their arrival in New York from France on the S. S. La Touraine. Their mother died recently and their father, unable to care for them because of wounds received in the war, is sending them to make their home with an aunt in Los Angeles.

Queen Marie of Roumania, who has postponed her visit to the United States until next Spring and who is so well liked by her populace for her grace, beauty, charm and democratic methods, attending the opening of the American Red Cross Hospital in Bucharest.

One of the latest pictures taken of the late widow of Napoleon III., Emperor of France. This picture shows the former Empress Eugenie, at the age of ninety-four, revisiting the palace of Montio, near Madrid, where she was living when she met and married the unhappy Napoleon. She is shown here surrounded by her nieces and nephews.

"Serbia Indomitable" the work of David Edstrom, the Swedish-American sculptor, which is the product of his desire to help Serbia. Describing the work, he says, "Serbia is a nation of women and children today. As I pondered this thought, there came to my mind the picture I have given this group. These helpless ones are struggling along a mountain road. A little boy leads his blind mother carrying a baby; a little girl carrying her doll trudges at her side; next is an old woman with two bundles and a child appealing for help."