What's What

By HELEN DECIE

When I awoke I seemed to be bathed in sunlight. I looked about in that curious indecision which characterizes one's waking in a strange place, wondering where I could be. Then as I glanced around the queer-looking room in which I found myself and saw in the other twin bed Dicky's brown head buried in his crumpled pillows, I realized I was at last in the southland which I had so long wished to visit.

Two sides of the room in which I slept were open from the ceiling to a line three feet from the floor. Wire screens, which could be opened and shut, covered the entire surface, and inside these were perfectly fitting, long glass wind-wards which hooked to the ceiling when they were not needed because of rain.

I had been too sleepy the night before to realize why my mother-in-law had fastened a wool jacket over my filmy nightdress. As I felt the cool, bracing air rushing in from two sides of the room I mentally thanked her for the precaution. I looked over anxiously at Dicky and saw with relief that he had put a light sweater over his pajamas.

I raised myself on one elbow—noting with gladness that though still weak there was no return of the deadly faintness which had characterized my nervous collapse of the day before—and drank in thirstily the beauty framed by the window space.

The Surge of Health. I had left frosty air and the snow and ice of a late spring, in my northern home. Here the air, while cool and bracing, still had the hint of spring in it. And down in the sand at a little distance beneath my window I saw crocuses and English violets in blossom. I almost awakened Dicky to share my joy at the mere sight of the flowers. I bethought myself just in time that, manlike, he would no doubt prefer a continuation of his nap to the sight of any flower on earth, and contented myself with feasting my own eyes upon the blossoms.

There was no grass to be seen in the grove of pines, and I surmised that the little on the lawns had been carefully planted there. Sand covered everything, and the effect of the trees and flowers growing directly from it was bewildering at first, although I admitted its peculiar charm.

Madge Betrays Resentment. One thing disappointed me. The winter had been so long and bleak that I had inordinately longed to see the first tender green of the maple and oak trees. It is a sight in which I revel each spring, and in my ignorance I had thought that I should see the first leading out of the trees when I arrived in the southland. But although there were a large number of trees besides the towering pines they were as stark and bare as those I had left behind in Marvin.

"I thought they'd surely be in leaf," I said mournfully to myself, and was startled to hear Dicky's voice answer me. "That gave me a jolt, too, old dear," he said, and looking quickly over at him I saw that he was sitting up in bed, his hands clasped around his knees, while his gaze was roaming over the scene I had been admiring. "I sure thought that I'd find the trees in leaf down here. I'm so fed up on snow and ice and brown wood that I'd like never to see another northern winter."

"But come to think of it," he went on brightly, "we couldn't expect much of a change in 700 miles. Guess it's much like our own climate only spring comes earlier and winter later. They have very little snow, and it seldom gets very cold."

BETTER BABIES. The crusade for better babies has spread from coast to coast and taken firm hold of American Mothers. Few women realize how much the ill health of the mother influences the unborn child, both physically and mentally. Women who suffer from mysterious pains, backache, nervousness, mental depression, headaches, etc., should rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, which for nearly forty years has been the standard remedy for these ailments.

EXCESSIVE ACIDITY is at the bottom of most digestive ills. KI-MOIDS FOR INDIGESTION afford pleasing and prompt relief from the distress of acid-dyspepsia. MADE BY SCOTT & BOWNE. YOU'LL GET RID OF BLACKHEADS SURE. There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads and that is to dissolve them. To do this get two ounces of calomine powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear, leaving the parts without any mark whatever. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions from the body that form in the pores of the skin. Pinching and squeezing only cause irritation, make large pores, and do not get the blackheads out after they become hard. The calomine powder and the water simply dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clear and their natural condition. Anyone troubled with these unsightly blemishes should certainly try this simple method.
