

COURT GRANTS POVERTY PLEA OF ALSON COLE

Murderer Given Another Chance to Save Life When Omaha Judge Honors Application.

Alson B. Cole, who fifth Allen Vincent Grammer, is under sentence of death in the Nebraska penitentiary on September 10, for the murder of Mrs. Lulu Vogt, this date having been selected after more than a dozen respite and reprieves, was granted a further stay yesterday by Judge J. W. Woodruff, of the United States district court, upon the application of J. B. Priest of Lincoln.

The stay was procured through the granting of an application for a writ of habeas corpus, returnable October 4, in the federal court at Lincoln. The writ is directed against Warden W. T. Fenton of the state penitentiary. The order directing the hearing was signed in Omaha Friday afternoon by Judge Woodruff and was filed in the federal court in Lincoln yesterday by Mr. Priest.

At the same time of signing the order for an application for the writ of habeas corpus, Judge Woodruff also signed an order permitting Cole to plead for his life in the federal courts of the United States without expense to himself, he having made a plea of poverty.

All His Money Gone.

Cole's application set forth that he has been confined in the state penitentiary for more than two years and that all property which he had at the time of his arrest has been used to pay court costs already incurred, and that he is at this time unable to obtain funds with which to further prosecute his fight for life. The signing of the poverty order will permit the murderer to carry his case through all of the courts of the country and finally to the United States supreme court in case of an adverse decision on his hearing for a writ of habeas corpus.

The two orders were signed by Judge Woodruff, acting for Judge T. C. Munger at Lincoln, who now is sitting as a member of the circuit court of appeals in Denver and who will not be able to return to Lincoln in time for the hearing.

Cole's companion, Grammer, in the murder for which they both are under sentence of death now has an appeal pending before the circuit court of appeals at St. Paul on an application for a new trial based on his plea of insanity. Two respites have been given the two convicted men since the case was first argued in May of this year before the circuit court.

Two Weeks to Hear Case.

A decision on the appeal from the findings of Judge Munger, who overruled the original application for a new trial when the case was transferred from the state to the federal courts, is not expected until about the middle of the next month.

According to Cole's attorney, the hearing on the habeas corpus writ, ordered today by Judge Woodruff, will necessitate at least two weeks' time, as many witnesses from Howard county, the seat of the crime, will be subpoenaed to prove the allegation that the jury at the original trial was influenced by the attitude of spectators and that Cole's confession in an Omaha hotel was obtained through other than regular channels and methods.

May Involve Police.

Starting revelations concerning the methods employed by both the Omaha and Lincoln police and county officers of Howard county in wringing Cole's confession from him in which he admitted murdering Mrs. Lulu Vogt, mother-in-law of Grammer, for which he and Grammer now are under sentence of death are promised to be brought out at the hearing which starts in Lincoln Monday, October 4.

"More Light" Needed At Municipal Dance, Reports City Inspector

The municipal dance at Miller park Friday night received the official O. K. of City Dancing Inspector H. L. Bridwell, who had only one criticism of the affair—that there were not quite enough lights—in his report to the city welfare board.

"There was no vulgarity and no indisconduct that I saw," declared Bridwell. The crowd was well-mannered and well behaved.

The dance was held on the boulevard and over 2,000 persons attended. "It was a huge success," declared Commissioner Thomas B. Falconer. "There was as nice a crowd there as could be gathered anywhere in Omaha."

Dr. Jennie Callias was not present.

Men Held On Suspicion of Robbing Rubber Company

Walter Davidson, Harley hotel, arrested by detectives last Thursday for investigation, was charged yesterday with the alleged robbery of the Goodrich Rubber and Tire company. Tires worth $5,000 were stolen.

Davidson was taken into custody after Harry Martin, Delmar hotel, who was also arrested, told the police he gave Davidson a key to the rubber company.

The tires have not been recovered. Martin is being held as an accessory to the crime. Chief of Detectives Anderson said.

Zimman Dares Thomas to Run If Mayor Resigns

City Commissioner Harry B. Zimman suggested yesterday that in case Mayor Smith resigns in September and Elmer Thomas announces his candidacy for the office of mayor that he may see whether or not "the city commission approved of his ideas of running the city."

"He will find out how he stands," declared Zimman. "I will say that I for one will not vote for him."

Constructing Big Drainage Ditch

Ak-Sar-Ben and the government air rail fields will be benefited by the drainage ditch of the Little Papillon district, which is now being constructed 20 feet deep from 300 feet north of Eighty-first and Cass streets along the Northwestern and Missouri Pacific railroad tracks to Sixty-first and L streets.

A big walking dragline shovel of the Callahan-Walker Construction company has been working on the ditch 24 hours a day for the past six weeks. The work is expected to be completed by December 8. The ditch will care for flood waters and provide subdrainage in the district. County roads and railroads running through the district will be freed from perennial floodings and washouts and farm lands will also benefit.

The drainage district was organized under the state laws through the efforts of the Ak-Sar-Ben association and includes all owners of property in the area. Field work in drawing up the district was handled by the Nelson Engineering company. City Commissioner Towl was consulting engineer.

Letters From Home-Made Father to Son

Easy Money and Diplomacy. By ED STREETER. Author of the Famous "Dere Mabel" Letters.

Dear Sun: I got yure letter tellin about what you thot youd do when you got out o college. Sounded more to me like a list of things you thot you wouldnt do. Remember there aint a job that wont look hopeless if you get the right person to tell you about it. Binsis is like a paintin. The further off you get the better it looks. My advise to you is to spend a cupel o years decidin what you want to do. Then go out an take what you can get. An youll be lucky to get it.

It dont make so much difference what you do so long yure not lookin fer easy money. The only thing I ever found about money that was easy was losin it. About one doler in a milyun jumps in the boat. The rest weighs fore pounds a pece an fights all the way to the gunnals.

I used to be a man ad frame his fust doler. Now he ether acts kind o shamed o it or else he refuses to take it an goes on strike fer twice as much. If the folks in this town ud spend more time figgerin out ways to make doler bills insted o thousand doler ones the local savins bank wouldnt be layin off its bookkeeper. Bout the heaviest work most out em do is to sit around Pooch Frisbee's store an tell each other how if you changed a dolar into Japanese Sen Sen and then changed that into Eyetalyun Liars an then take that to England and get Pounds an Ounces fer it, youd dubbel yure money. Yes, says I, an the way youd dubbel it is by avarin it in two.

"They been thinkin about big money so long it dont seem worth while to go out an make a few dolars. An most on em dont. Its an ill wind that dont blow nobody over, tho, as the sayin is, fer all this talk has gave Hank Peters the fust job he ever had in his life. He spends his time figgerin out how much muncy he could make if he had any. The other day he came runnin in the store all of a heat.

"I got it," he says. "Got what?" says Pooch, movin away. "A way to make muncy," says Hank. "Oh," says Pooch reeleved, "Is that all?"

Hank's Premise Was False. Then Hank set down an says all he needed was five hundred dolars. "Well," says Hank, "I would only theres one point Im not sure on an I aint got time to go over to Milford an find out."

"Pooch says they all remind him of a fello that sees a trick man take a rabbit out o a high hat an then goes home in trias to start a rabbit farm with his granfathers beever."

Speekin o Urope, I kind o lost interest in this here Legee o Nashuns lately. I dont have time to read the whole paper an Id rather read about the diferunt wars. It takes so much time fer two countrys to say "Howdedo" to each other that a ambishus nashun with more powder than branes can fight a cupel o wars an get back in its hole before the Legee o Nashuns gets thru the openin overchurn.

One reason fer this is that diplumats is very delicat creeters. They cant work em before 11 in the mornin an not after 3, with 2 hours out fer noon dinner. Now when you figger how its a disgrace to say anything out in less than five hours you can see how a meatin o the countrys wouldnt be no hummin live o indutree, as the papers say. Diplumats have a motto somethin like the boy skouts: "One deed a day—an no more." When a bunch o them get together the fust thing they do is to hand in there papers showin there themselves an one somebody else. Havin taken three or four weeks to establish this, tho they all knew each other since they was kids, they have the openin prayer o thankgivin on account o havin fixed it sos there couldnt be no more war.

Then one o them gets up, an in the cours o four hours says there a war goin on. Everybody that can read knows that anyway so they leave the stenograggers to take down the speech and go out an play golf.

"tries to start a rabbit farm with his grandfather's beever."

You never can prove Hanks wrong cause he always starts with something imposibel. He had a skeme that was a sort o cross between a Cooks toor and a slight a hand performance. The idea was this forin exchange which means that every country is so crazy about the other countrys money that they give you twice what its worth just to have it lyin around. Then he started skipkin round Urope so fast it made us dizzy.

Hank couldnt help makin muncy on that trip any more than Bryan can help makin speeches. Just to listen to his travelin expences mount up was a luckshury. Ridin the bumpers to New York an goin stearge to Italy was the only

Peace Negotiations Still Continued by Poles and Russians

London, Aug. 28.—(By The Associated Press).—The Russo-Polish peace negotiations were continued on August 25, says a wireless dispatch from Moscow today. The delegates discussed the Russian terms, which the Poles declared unacceptable.

The Poles, according to the wireless, relied chiefly on the recent Polish military. A member of the Russo-Ukrainian delegation stated there was no Polish basis for peace, but merely a rejection of the Russian terms. He added:

"Our proposals are not final, as we are willing to make peace. We do not qualify our policy by the condition of things on the various fronts, as for us this war is to obtain peace."

"The negotiations are continuing, the wireless states.

Detective Gives $50 Liberty Bond to His New Nephew

Detective Joe Wavrin was passing out the cigars yesterday.

Joe was announcing the birth of a nephew on the 67th birth anniversary of the baby's grandfather and Joe's father, Joseph L. Wavrin, retired fire captain, 3009 South Fifteenth street.

Beside passing out the cigars, Detective Wavrin drew out a $50 Liberty bond from the bank and gave it to his tiny nephew, who was born to Mr. and Mrs. August Petersen, 6549 South Forty-eighth street.
