

MENNONITES OF CANADA TO FLEE THROUGH OMAHA

Migration to Mississippi to Escape Persecution for Refraining From Military Service.

The ancient march of 10,000 Greek mercenaries under the leadership of the younger Cyrus, from Cunaxa, on the Euphrates river, to the Euxine sea, as recounted in the Greek author Xenophon's "Anabasis," and the retreat of Napoleon's thousands, as modernized after fashion today in the exodus of thousands of Mennonites, a religious sect from the old world, from Saskatchewan, Canada, to a newly established colony near Meridian, Miss., according to R. A. Leavitt, of Mississippi, who is in Omaha visiting T. F. Maloney, 1620 Binney street.

More interesting is the statement that the retreating Mennonites from Calgary, Canada, will pass through Omaha, beginning October 1, on their katabasis to their "new world." Their peculiar habits, manners, religious beliefs, modes of living, and methods of government, have been a universal curiosity.

Hold 5,000 Acres.
The Mennonites will settle on 5,000 acres of land, an advance colony already in the Mississippi territory setting up tents, houses and churches, Mr. Leavitt declared.

Sale of the southern land was made after representatives of the religious sect had refused offers to settle in South American countries. The retreat of the Mennonites from Canada where they had settled for the past 30 years in raising crops because of persecution, Mr. Leavitt said.

A chance to gain a glimpse of the character of the followers of Mennon special trains bearing the immigrants pass through this city.

The religious sect the Mennonites present did not permit their young men to enter the world war and though they purchased Liberty bonds and assisted in relief work, they have been persecuted because of this, Mr. Leavitt stated.

The Mennonite religion is based on the doctrine, "Thou shalt not kill." They do not believe in original sin, and object to taking oaths, making war or going to law. Origin of the Mennonites was in Holland.

Hold Themselves Aloof.
They live in their own class and decline to mingle much with the community in which they are located," Mr. Leavitt said.

Agriculture is the principal industry of the Mennonites. Settlement of the new colonists near Meridian is interesting to many Omaha real estate men who possess tracts of land adjoining.

Mr. Leavitt will return to Meridian tomorrow to assist the elders of the Mennonites in the plans of colonization.

Polite Stranger Steals Man's Wallet After Helping Wife On Car

A well-dressed, middle-aged man crowded ahead of H. C. Page, chief accountant for the Union Pacific at Evanston, Wyo., stopping at the Castle hotel, as he boarded a street car at Fourteenth and Harney streets Friday night.

The polite gentleman assisted Mrs. Page up the step of the car and jostled Page in so doing. Once aboard, the middle-aged gallant asked the conductor if he was on a car for Council Bluffs. He dismounted when informed he was not. Arriving at the hotel, some time later, Page learned his purse containing $100, a $50 liberty bond and several railroad passes, had disappeared from his pocket. He immediately suspected the middle-aged gallant and notified the police. Page wishes the unknown coariter would at least mail back his passes, even if he must retain the cash and bond.

Emergency Patients Now Taken to Nearest Hospital

City emergency calls are now handled by a zoning system following a conference between City Commissioner J. Dean Ringer, Police Inspector Andrew Pattullo, City Health Commissioner J. F. Edwards and Captain of Police H. B. Hayes, at that time acting chief.

The drivers take the police car to the scene of the accident immediately on report. As they are leaving the case is reported to a police surgeon, who goes to the hospital in the particular zone in which the accident occurred. The zones are made according to hospitals with in-termed on duty.

Omaha Artist Displays Paintings in Minneapolis

J. Laurie-Wallace, Omaha artist, has received innumerable ovations in Minneapolis, Minn., where he is exhibiting four large compositions of his painting and a number of small studies of human interest.

He was a guest of Louis J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, Thursday, when the railroad magnate requested the artist to prepare a life-size portrait of him in his study. Because of other paintings which demanded Mr. Wallace's attention, he declined the request until a later date.

Woman Arrested Tells Man Whipped Her

Corra Johnson, 9902 North Thirtieth street, was arrested early yesterday, charged with intoxication, after police had been called to Thirtieth and Turner streets, where it was said a woman had been hurt in an accident.

When police arrived they found that Mrs. Johnson had sustained a wrenched ankle and several body bruises, but that the injuries had not been caused by an accident. She informed them that Andrew Waite, a friend she had known for three years, had struck her following an argument. Police were unable to locate Waite.

Teaching Her to Drive

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

The Pupil—I don't see why I can't take the wheel here. I know which way to turn.

The Teacher—There's too much traffic on this road. Wait till we get on a back street.

The Pupil—But it won't do me any good to learn to drive on a back street. If I can't drive in traffic, what's the good of driving at all. I know which way to turn the wheel now.

The Teacher—But you can't stop and you can't start—say nothing of shifting gears.

The Pupil—I don't think that is so very important. If I know which way to turn the wheel I can't run into anybody, can I?

The Teacher—Supposing a car is ahead of you and won't turn out?

The Pupil—Well, if he hasn't got sense enough to turn out so much the worse for it.

The Teacher—That would do you any good when you're spilled out on the road.

The Pupil—Oh, very well. But we're wasting a lot of time. I know which way to turn the wheel.

The Teacher—Here's a quiet street. Now take the wheel.

The Pupil—I've got it. Now what do I do?

The Teacher—Take out the clutch. Where is the clutch?

The Pupil—What is the clutch?

The Teacher—The thing you've got your foot on.

The Pupil—All right, it's out. Why don't it start?

The Teacher—That's the brake. The Pupil—Why didn't you say so?

The Teacher—Stop! Stop! You haven't put the gear in.

The Pupil—If you would let me experiment around till I found out how to start it myself, I'd get along faster.

The Teacher—And wreck us both, to say nothing of the car. Now watch, pull this lever back on the left-hand side. Now take out the clutch very slowly. No, not that way. You nearly hit that tree.

The Pupil—I did, exactly as you told me to.

The Teacher—Yes, but you put your foot on the accelerator.

The Pupil—Well, I had to put my foot on something, didn't I?

The Teacher—I suppose so. Now try again. No, don't do that!

The Pupil—Don't do what?

The Teacher—Start with the wheels cramped around that way. You'll go right into the ditch.

The Pupil—How did I know the wheels were cramped around?

The Teacher—Couldn't you see they were?

The Pupil—Certainly not, I was looking at the clutch.

The Teacher—Try again. That's right. Now keep her going slowly.

The Pupil—I knew how to do that, I could run this car if you'd get out. What makes it grind that way?

The Teacher—You're in first gear. You want to shift now.

The Pupil—No I don't. I'm doing very well. Let me alone.

The Teacher—But you must shift. Take your foot off the accelerator. No, not off the clutch, off the accelerator. Now let out the clutch slowly. Now shift the lever diagonally. Not so fast. You'll tear out the transmission.

The Pupil—Don't speak to me like that. You frighten me and get me all confused.

Go Slowly.
The Teacher—Now shift diagonally as I told you. There, that's right. Go ahead slowly. SLOWLY, I tell you.

The Pupil—Gee, it's fun to know how, isn't it. Now shall we run out into traffic. I know which way to turn the wheel.

The Teacher—Not yet, you still have got to go into high.

The Pupil—Where is high?

The Teacher—High gear I mean. Take your foot off the clutch again.

The Pupil—You're always making me take my foot off the clutch and every time I do it the old thing stops.

The Teacher—Pull the lever back straight. No not that way, straight! That's right! Now you're in high. Not so fast, not so FAST!

The Pupil—I'm sure I'm not making it go fast. It just sort of jumped forward.

The Teacher—Take your foot off the accelerator.

The Pupil—Which did you say the accelerator was?

The Teacher—That small knob at your right. Stop stamping on it.

merce, the American Smelting and Refining company, the Union Pacific shops, the Paxson Vierling iron foundry, and all the packing houses on the South Side, joined in one lone five-minute shriek promptly at the stroke of 12.

Simultaneously, chimes and bells of the various Catholic and protestant churches of the city clanged forth the news that American womanhood has been elevated to a footing of equality with American manhood at the voting booth.

Mrs. H. C. Sumney assisted Mrs. Smith and the mayor in arranging the jubilee in Omaha.

BELLS RING AND WHISTLES BLOW FOR SUFFRAGE

Omaha Joins In Five-Minute National Celebration of Enfranchisement of Women.

Omaha celebrated woman's achievement of suffrage at noon yesterday.

Whistles blew and bells rang from 12 noon to 12:05 p. m.

The noise was part of a national jubilee of a similar nature.

Every city, town, village and hamlet in the state joined in at the request of Governor McKelvie's proclamation.

At the instigation of Mrs. Draper Smith, Mayor Smith promoted the noisy greeting of the women's vote in Omaha.

Elks to Initiate Class In Masonic Temple Next Month

The "500 class" of Elks has been completed. Exalted Ruler Sears of the local Elks lodge announced yesterday, and 150 candidates for the 1,000 class are already on the roll. This is part of the drive now going on or 3,500 members for the local lodge. Initiation will take place September 19, in the Masonic temple, the Elks club rooms not being large enough for such a big class.

Young Omaha Lovers Ask Bluffs Jailer for License

Finding the court house in Council Bluffs all dark at 1:30 a. m. Friday, well dressed young man about 22 years old and a girl about 18 years old, roused Jailer Orin Kinsell from his slumbers with a request for a marriage license.

The young man said he worked at Union station in Omaha and could not get off until after 11 p. m. The jailer directed them to Clerk J. N. Tollinger, five blocks away. The young couple likewise awakened Clerk Tollinger who advised them to wait until daylight and the pair drove away in a taxicab without disclosing their names or addresses. They did not return at daylight.
