Object to Participation Because La Follette Candidate for Governor Has Been Selected as Speaker.

Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Leased Wire. Janesville, Wis., Aug. 31.—Action refusing to participate in a Labor day parade to be held here September 6 by labor unions of the city was taken last night by the Janesville American Legion because John J. Blaine, candidate for governor of Wisconsin, is being sent by Robert M. La Follette to speak in his place. A resolution unanimously adopted stated that any participation by the legion in the parade would not only be an endorsement for Blaine for governor, but would uphold La Follette in his candidacy for the United States senate. Part of the resolution reads: "Participation by Janesville American Legion in any program in which Mr. Blaine appears as spokesman for Senator La Follette, whose attitude in the war was such as to bring disgrace upon Wisconsin's soldiers and citizens, would not only be a direct endorsement of Mr. Blaine's candidacy for governor of Wisconsin, but also a direct endorsement of Senator La Follette's candidacy for re-election to the United States senate. Members of the legion wanted it clearly understood that they have no fight with labor and would gladly participate in the parade if Blaine were not to speak. However, they declared that they clearly remembered the many insults they received while in the army as soon as men from other states learned they hailed from Wisconsin, which was due directly to La Follette's stand on the war.

Harding Urges More Aid For Reclamation Service In Speech to Governors

Nominee Pictures Western Country as Wonderland Holding Undeveloped Possibilities of Great Value and Suggests Home for Service Men on Reclaimed Land in Talk to Western Executives.

By The Associated Press. Marion, O., Aug. 31.—More federal aid in reclaiming and conserving the nation's natural resources, particularly in the west, was advocated by Senator Harding today in an address here to a group of republicans and governors. The nominee pictured the western country as a wonderland holding undeveloped possibilities of great value in the present period of food shortage, and suggested that former service men might be furnished homes on reclaimed western lands. Quoting Theodore Roosevelt's reclamation policies, Senator Harding declared one of the greatest tasks in the immediate future was to take up again the reclamation and conservation work fostered by Roosevelt and neglected since the democrats came into power. "There is an undeveloped mountain west awaiting the touch of genius and industry," said Senator Harding, "and there are doubtless thousands of service men who would be glad to turn to this most desirable development very much as service men did in the after-period of the civil war. There are, of course, differences in condition, and the mountain lands are not so ready to answer man's call as were the prairies; but with a helpful policy on the part of government these lands can be made available for limitless contributions to the sustenance of the republic and the compensation of those who participate in developing them. Intensive industrial development and the concentration of population in cities cannot go on unless we have an expansion of the food supply upon which they depend for sustenance. Our vision of the ultimate development of the mountain empire, reveals a great region, developed uniformly, with regard to all its variegated possibilities. I have never been able to think of reclamation as connoting merely the construction of ditches, and dams, and reservoirs, to put water on dry lands."

West Awaits Magic Touch. "There is an undeveloped mountain west awaiting the touch of genius and industry," said Senator Harding, "and there are doubtless thousands of service men who would be glad to turn to this most desirable development very much as service men did in the after-period of the civil war."

Woman Who Killed Husband Freed, Feud Is Feared by Police

Fear that a feud will follow the freeing of Mrs. Lucia Indelicato, 715 Pacific street, by a coroner's jury Monday, who shot and killed her husband at their home Sunday, has caused police to prepare for any emergency in the neighborhood. The dead man was Alko Indelicato, barber, and his wife testified she shot him in self-defense. Their son, Marion, 20 years old, was the principal witness at the inquest, Philip Indelicato, brother of the dead man, interrupted the boy's testimony at frequent intervals, declaring his statements untrue. Testimony given showed the husband had been away from home a week and had returned to abuse his wife when she refused to allow him to enter the home. She said he attacked her with a butcher knife. The mother and son were guarded by police on their way from the inquest to the police station, where the woman's brother took them in charge. An electrically operated machine has been invented that does all the work of cleaning and polishing shoes except that it has to be guided by hand.
