More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

CONSOLATION

Scientists report that bald-headed men never go insane. No longer a murderous fury I harbor. As I stretch out my length in a chair, And list to the words of a garlic-breath'd barber, "You gotta not macha da hair!" No longer I care if the light is reflected. Or feel that a fellow is never reflected. Who's abandoned forever his comb. For heads shy of thatches are seldom erratic. And though little children may jeeringly scoff, I'd rather be bald than have rats in my attic. I'd rather be hairless than cracked in the ear.

Though filled with dismay when my tresses departed (They went in a single short year), No longer I gaze at the mirror down-hearted. But rather with smiles of good cheer. When gentlemen learned in science assure me That lunatics always have hair. Though heads that are bald are not youthfully snappy, Though baldness is something the thoughtless deride, I'd rather be lockless than utterly snappy. And have nothing on top, than a vacuum inside!

I am deaf to the jests of the puerile scoffer, I care not how people may knock, No tonics or nostrums the barber may offer. Shall ever be sprayed on my block. The roof they were meant for is gone, Let doctors employ them in some nice asylum Where people have hair to keep on. And though on my roof tree the gas light is glowing, I murmur a cheerful, "Tut tut!" To ribald reproaches, contented in knowing That hucks always grow on a nut!

Common Sense

Content Yourself. By J. J. MUNDY.

Instead of thinking all the time about the noise at your place of employment and your home, suppose you reverse the matter, go out and think how glad you ought to be that you are not deaf. Instead of being so snappy because you cannot get your nap out undisturbed, suppose you remember how lonesome you were all Winter among strangers without father or mother, sisters or brothers. Instead of being so touchy that you cannot take a little teasing, suppose you think what it would mean to you if you should lose the jolly little torment who means so little harm but who annoys you so much every day. Suppose others did come in when you wanted to be alone with somebody's big sister. Suppose they weren't money to go to the mountains for your summer vacation. Are there not a thousand and one reasons why you should be thankful and happy that you are well and alive if conditions are not just what you might choose? Look at the bright side of your dark clouds. (Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.)

WAIT TILL JANUARY

We don't hear so much about the coal shortage now. But our ears will be sharper next winter.

INVESTIGATION PROOF

Nobody is going to detect William Jennings Bryan in the act of giving too much money to anybody's campaign fund.

IT ISN'T THE NOISE

You can't judge by the sound. If you listened to the cheers in the picture shows you'd swear that Babe Ruth would be the next president. (Copyright, 1920, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

SLEEPY-TIME TALES

THE TALE OF RUSTY WREN

BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER VI.

Mr. Crow to the Rescue.

As time went on, and the Green family overslept each morning, Rusty began to grow very weary of the monotonous "Cuckoo! cuckoo!" which came every half hour, all day long, through the kitchen window of the farmhouse.

"Ah!" Rusty cried. "An alarm clock!"

"Not," he replied, "it's just an every day clock. And, instead of striking, it lets this little wooden bird come out and sing."

Rusty Wren said that he wouldn't care for a clock like that and that he didn't see why Farmer Green had brought it home anyhow.

"Cuckoo! cuckoo!" came the women and children, Mr. Crow remarked wisely.

"Then you think Farmer Green was not dissatisfied with my singing?" You think he would like me to wake him every morning, just as I used to do?" Rusty waited eagerly for Mr. Crow's opinion.

Old Mr. Crow pondered for a while before answering. He reflected that since it was long past complaining time it really made no difference to him whether Farmer Green slept or not. If the corn had just been put in the ground he would have liked to have Farmer Green stay in bed all day long.

"I understand that the whole family enjoy your songs," Mr. Crow told Rusty at last. "And for the present you may as well sing your dawn-song right here in your own tree, beneath Farmer Green's window. But if you're living here next spring I wish you would consult me again."

Rusty Wren agreed to that, thanking Mr. Crow for his kindness, too. And, afterward, instead of being angry, he laughed whenever he heard that silly "Cuckoo! cuckoo!" Since he knew it was only a wooden bird, Rusty Wren was jealous no longer. The next morning he awakened Farmer Green at the break of day. And the hired man was so sleepy that he fell downstairs and couldn't work for a whole week. (Copyright Grosset & Dunlap.)

"Where's Farmer Green?" he inquired.

"I'd like to know what sort of bird that is!" he exclaimed at last. "If he'd only come out here in the yard I'd ask him his name—and tell him what I think of him, too!"

But the stranger never stirred out of the kitchen. And at length, Rusty decided to make inquiries about him. Seeing Jimmy Rabbit passing through the orchard on his way home from the cabbage patch, Rusty called to him.

"If you happen to see old Mr. Crow I wish you would ask him if he won't please come right over to the orchard," Rusty Wren said.

"There's something I want to find out," said Mr. Crow, who knows so much that perhaps he can help me."

Jimmy Rabbit declared that he would be delighted to deliver the message. And he must have gone out of his way to find Mr. Crow, for the old gentleman arrived at the orchard in less than 16 minutes.

Rusty was waiting for him. And, having explained about the strange bird as well as he could, he asked Mr. Crow what he thought.

"I'd like to hear his song," said Mr. Crow.

"Come right over to my tree near the house!" Rusty urged him.

"Mr. Crow hesitated."

"Where's Farmer Green?" he inquired.

"Oh! He's working out in the hayfield."

"Where's Johnnie Green?" Mr. Crow asked.

"Oh! He's in the hayfield, too, riding on the hayrack," Rusty Wren explained.

"I'll come with you, then," Mr. Crow croaked.

So they flew to the dooryard. And they hadn't waited long when the strange bird sang his "Cuckoo! cuckoo!"

"There!" said Rusty. "That's his silly song!"

And to his surprise Mr. Crow haw-hawed right out.

"What's the joke?" Rusty Wren wanted to know.

"That's not a bird," said old Mr. Crow—"or, at least, it's not a real bird. He's made of wood. And he lives inside a cuckoo clock!"

WHY?

Why Is the "American Beauty" Rose So Called?

In the garden of Bancroft, the horticulturist, were planted several varieties of roses which had been recently imported from France. One of these—much admired by a florist named George Field, who happened to be looking over the place in company with Bancroft's gardener—had no label or name, its designation (having been lost during the trip from abroad. Field requested several years, he and his brother raised a large stock of the roses, and advertised their novelty as the "American Beauty"—a name which they considered best suited to this new and exquisite variety. The Fields are said to have made a small fortune out of the transaction, and the American Beauty has since become the most famous of all roses in the United States. Only experts can grow it to perfection; there is a recognized type of greenhouse especially adapted to its needs; it always brings the highest of prices and in the market reports it is quoted in a class by itself.

Some time after Field & Brother introduced the "American Beauty" horticulturists began to investigate its origin with the result that its proper name was found to have been "Mme. Ferdinand Jamin," a variety which is considered to be of little importance in England and France. But the American Beauty has been so modified by conditions on this side of the Atlantic and it has been so improved by careful handling, that many experts claim that it is now a practically different variety from the original stock.
