Evening and Clouds

Evening came on apace; in full orb'd glory, The sun drew to his couch— through visted trees, He glided—flashing broad and full he wore a Look of unwonted joy, for rest and ease After his day of toil—far clouds hung hoary Along the east, then kindled by degrees As slow he sunk—fresh bloomed the aerial rose, While strumed the west, as gushing furnace glows. —James Gates Percival.

Stout women and large plaids, bright colors and shiny materials are not affinities.

Beauty

Jade and amber, green and gold, Turquoise, silver, ivory, Jewels radiantly bold Gleam from dark antiquity. Here are rings that queens have worn Here are chains that dazled kings, Kindling colors, carved horn, Red that shouts and blue that stings. Resting in a bed of glass Hard-wrought, beauty beaming lies, Nite may choke, and Empire pass. Beauty flashes, still and wise. —From Christian Science Monitor.

To Prevent Sunburn The best way to preserve a clear complexion of delicate texture and tint is to protect it when going motor-ing, walking or swimming. First use a cleaning cream, after which day cream should be dabbed on sparingly and worked well into the skin. Over this apply a good skin lotion and then powder.
