

Stock Yard Fire Threatens Plant Of Cudahy Here

Afternoon Blaze Destroys Hay Market on South Side—Packing Plant Endangered for Time.

Fire of undetermined origin consuming 500 tons of hay in the hay market at Thirty-sixth and L streets, at 2 p. m. yesterday threatened to spread to the Cudahy packing plant just south of the raging flames.

Hay was being unloaded from box cars on the side track when flames burst forth at the east end of the hay pile. High wind spread the flames rapidly and soon the entire market was a blazing furnace. The damage was estimated at $15,000.

The first alarm was turned in at 1:30 p. m. and the second at 2 p. m. Apparatus was called from Omaha to work on the flames and keep them from spreading to the packing plant if possible.

One box car on the side track was exploded when the fire spread to the heart of its contents and burst into flames.

At 3 o'clock the fire department had the fire under control. More than a dozen lines of hose were stretched to the scene, and streams of water were poured into the seething mass of flames from every direction. The cross-town street cars were routed over the Q street car line and turned back to the city at Twenty-sixth and Q streets on account of the track to the L street terminus being crossed by the many lines of hose.

The Cudahy Packing company fire department was in readiness to protect the plant from flying sparks, which were numerous on account of the high wind. At a late hour Wednesday afternoon the fire was still smoldering, and a number of streams of water will be played upon the fire until entirely extinguished, according to a statement of the battalion chief of the South Side.
