

Homeless Ones Of Rome Storm Many Churches

Catholic Cathedral Raided by Socialists Who Are Unable to Gain Admittance—
Will Try Again.

Rome, Sept. 23.—The Osservatore Romano, the Vatican organ, says that last night socialists attempted to invade a church in a popular quarter, but did not succeed in breaking through the door. They postponed the undertaking to a later date, when, the paper asserts, they will attempt to occupy the Lateran palace, which was once the residence of the popes.

The newspaper also asserts that socialists are threatening to invade the Catholic club and two nunneries.

London, Sept. 23.—The attempted invasion of religious edifices in Rome is part of a movement among persons unable to obtain dwellings, owing to the shortage in housing accommodations, to seize unoccupied homes and other buildings and install themselves, according to a dispatch to the London Times from Rome.

Regains Use of Right Arm By Successful Operation

John P. Cummings, assistant to the passenger traffic manager of the Union Pacific system, left last Sunday for Rochester, Minn., with the forlorn hope that the Mayo brothers will perform the miracle of restoring the use of his right arm, incapacitated for the last 10 years as the result of his being thrown from his pony while touring through Glacier park.

Wednesday his wife received a telegram from Rochester with the glad tidings that Mr. Cummings' operation was successful, and his right arm will be restored.

I'M THE GUY

I'M THE GUY who goes to sleep while he's crossing the street and then bawls out the automobile drivers who nearly run over him.

Why should I keep my mind on where I'm going and what I'm doing if I want to be thinking of something else or nothing at all?

If I want to amble across the street with my mind on my own business it's up to you to keep out of my way, not up to me to keep out of your way.

It's just as much my privilege to cross a street as it is yours to ride on it, so where you get off making rules for me to follow? I'm the one that should make the rules for you.

And if I don't want to pay any attention to your horn that's my affair, too. And I've as much right to hawl you out as you have to hawl at me.

If you guys had your own way, guys like me wouldn't get any rest. But believe me, Johnny Goggles, you'll do the winking up when I'm sticking around. Every time.

Common Sense

By J. J. MUNDY.
Get Rid of Your Grouch.
Don't retire when you are angry.
Get rid of your grouch before you go to bed.

If there is a family jar in your room and go to bed where you lie awake with angry thoughts coursing through your brain.

Retiring in this condition means a sleepless night—a wild-eyed condition in the morning.

You pay the real penalty next day. If anything happens at office or shop which angers you don't take your grouch home to think of all evening.

Doing this, if you are like most mortals, means your main thought will be revenge.

Your thoughts will be of a get-even nature.

The time between retiring and passing off to sleep is a good time to make plans for success and for next day's work, to improve it, but a particularly dangerous time to plan evil against anyone because the mind seems to be able to suggest more diabolical methods of action at night.

Use your valuable thinking time for good purpose.

WHY?

Do we speak of something as being "Simon pure?"

This expression, meaning "the real man," had its origin in the name of a Pennsylvania Quaker in Mrs. Centlivre's comedy, "A Bold Stroke for a Wife." Being about to visit London to attend the quarterly meeting of his sect, Amundab Holdfast sends a letter of recommendation and introduction by his friend, Simon Pure, to another Quaker, Obadiah Prim, a rigid stern man who is guardian of Anne Lovely, a young lady reputed to have a fortune of £30,000. Colonel Feignwell, another character in the same play—they favored descriptive names in those days—being enamored of Miss Lovely and her fortune, avails himself of an accidental discovery of the letter of introduction, and succeeds in passing himself off as Simon Pure.

The real Simon Pure, calling at Prim's house, is treated as an impostor, and is obliged to leave the house in order to find witnesses who can vouch for him. Meanwhile, Feignwell, the villain of the piece, succeeds in obtaining from Prim a written and unconditional consent to his marriage with Anne. But virtue is triumphant in the end. Simon Pure reappears with his witnesses, the scoundrelly Feignwell is exposed, Prim discovers the plot which has been concocted. Anne falls in love with Simon, and the original letter given to Feignwell, is used to secure a happy ending.

In the light of modern dramatic standards the play may be considered lacking in some essentials, but it scored a great success when produced and the name of "Simon Pure" was gradually applied to anything which was genuine and above imitation.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

NO PEP

Far be it from us, who by nature are quiet
And little addicted to struggle or strife,
To pose as a flaming apostle of riot
Or advocate rows in political life.
But somehow, with haunting regret, we remember
When candidates were not so flabby of spine,
But went on the stump from July till November
Arraigning opponents as liars and swine.

With gentle remonstrance no speaker would dally,
They had fresh incentives to spring every night;
Vast crowds would attend a political rally
Because they were sure it would end in a fight.

A solon, accused of an improper action,
Did not say the charge put a strain on belief,
But went to his own and his friends' satisfaction,
He labelled his rival a crook and a thief.

The issues were left for the papers to settle,
The candidates held them in utter disdain,
And after the mode of the pot and the kettle
They blackened each other throughout the campaign.

They listed all crimes that were ever committed
Through the quarter century of his sect,
And swore their opponents had done the whole lot;
They vowed that the job for which best they were fitted—
We mean the opponents—was stopping hot shot.

We manage campaigns in a kindlier fashion;
Our candidates argue with phrases polite;
They never would stoop to the language of passion,
And seldom do meetings break up in a fight.

They talk to the crowd as they would to a jury;
They never grow violent, Heaven forbid!
Or laugh themselves into a lather of fury,
Yet somehow or other we wish that they did!

AND THEY DON'T NEED IT
The speed-up campaign doesn't appear to arouse anybody but drivers of automobiles.

WE NEVER LEARN
Ship yards are closing all over the country. We are a good deal like Noah. We only build ships when we are terribly scared.

Parents Problems

Should girls of high school age be permitted to sell fancy articles which they make?

Under certain circumstances there is no reason why this should not be done. At little neighborhood fairs, for example, or for some such object as the Red Cross, the girls might well make money in this way.

Whether they should ever do it otherwise than for charity is a question for each girl's mother to decide for her daughter.

Will Lay Cornerstone.
McCook, Neb., Sept. 23.—(Special.)—The cornerstone of the Ash Creek Lutheran church of this county will be laid Sunday. A fine country church will be erected at once.

To the Man who is Interested in Truck Tire Economy

CAREFUL truck owners are figuring their costs pretty closely these days—tire costs along with the others.

It is no longer "clap on a new tire and hang the expense." At least, not with the owners we come in contact with.

Service, wear, traction, cushioning qualities, construction are coming to mean more than they used to, not only to owners but to drivers of motor trucks.

And the more they mean, the more we find truck owners and operators turning to the new United States Grainless Rubber Solid Truck Tire.

The tire that overcomes splitting and base-separation—that goes on its way day after day, month after month, wearing down smoothly and uniformly without undue attention and without expense.

Handling United States Solid Truck Tires in this city is in keeping with the progressive policy of our concern.

Something new—something a little in advance of the times—is always coming out of the United States Rubber Company.

Before ordering a new truck, consult us about the kind of tires to specify.
