

Three Narrowly Escape When Car Lunges Into River

Man Rescues Young Son and Then Saves Wife From Swift Current by Commandeering Boat.

J. F. Ackerman, Mrs. Ackerman and son, Stanley, 5, of Glenwood, la., narrowly escaped death Monday night when the automobile in which they were riding slid into the Missouri river at the Plattsmouth ferry where the bank along the narrow driveway caved in.

The Ackermans had just driven off the ferry and pulled up to the narrow driveway and stopped, to allow another automobile to pass.

The bank caved in sufficiently to allow the car to slide backwards into the river, where a 20-foot current was rushing past.

Commandeering Motor Boat. Mr. Ackerman, realizing the situation as the car gave way, grasped his son, and dragged him from the machine to the shore in safety.

The automobile with Mrs. Ackerman was swirled by the current, in the meantime, and was half submerged.

The machine was carried almost a quarter of a mile down the river, with Mrs. Ackerman kept afloat by her coat, which was filled by the wind swooping along the river.

She was rescued by Mr. Ackerman, who commandeered a motorboat and seized the hallowed coat, dragging his wife into the boat.

Automobile Is Located. All three victims were taken to Hotel Riley in Plattsmouth, where Mrs. Ackerman has been under a physician's care until noon yesterday, when she was removed to her home in Glenwood.

The automobile, which continued to drift with the current, has been located and will be recovered.

Mr. Ackerman is president and general manager of the Dunn & Dudley general store in Glenwood.

Balliet, have attended 17 and 13 years, respectively, without a miss. A son, Earl, has dropped pennies in the Sunday school basket every Sunday for the past 14 years. Cox Is Tied By Wilson, Says Roosevelt's Sister covenant of the league of nations trying to throw us into a multitude of little wars in which we had no concern. The people have not forgotten his slogan of hypocrisy.

Governor Cox is really a spokesman for the Wilson ideas. In spite of proclaiming himself a free man, since he paid a visit to the White House, he has not been his own man, but only a spokesman for Mr. Wilson.

He First Planned League.

"When Colonel Roosevelt received the Nobel peace prize, 10 years ago, he said that he had planned the rise of some association between nations that might prevent conflict," she said. "When the first news of the world war in 1914 reached America, he was in my country home at Herkimer, N. Y. He spoke to me then about the possibility of a league of nations, and planned a series of articles outlining a plan for world peace. Frankly, I have wondered why President Wilson never recognized the ideas, instead of assuming so many of them himself."

"When he showed me the first article, I asked him if he did not consider the plan very ideal, but impractical. He replied that he was doubtful himself, and was terribly afraid that it might prove unworkable. He realized that it was impossible to have such an association unless each nation should reserve its own sovereignty. He still hoped to see some way for nations to join together to make wars less possible."

"I can see his face now as he said to me one day, 'I am giving it up. I do not see how we can keep America absolutely safeguarded and enter any league with the world.'"

Talks With Lodge.

"By the time Mr. Wilson got to the subject my brother recognized the impossibility of any international league. Finally, as he lay on his sick bed in December, 1918, he asked that we telegraph Cabot Lodge to come for a conference. The following day Mr. Lodge sat and talked of the league of nations for three hours. Each tentative plan of the president was taken up in turn, in my presence. Practically every reservation afterward brought up by Senator Lodge was approved there by Colonel Roosevelt. While he said he hoped, by the republican reservations, to make the league a good thing, he very much doubted if even with the reservations it might not be a war breeder instead of a preventive of war."

"The next day he and Mr. Lodge again went over the proposals, and Colonel Roosevelt absolutely disapproved of the plan unless the president was backed by the reservations. When Governor Cox speaks of his approval I wish it to be understood that what he had in mind was not the Wilsonian document."

Omaha Woman Attempts to Regain Custody of Sons

Nebraska City, Neb., Sept. 28.—(Special.)—Mrs. Marie Paulson Hislop of Omaha, in company with an attorney, appeared here yesterday and began habeas corpus proceedings in the county court to regain custody of her two sons, Herbert and Robert Paulson, 6 and 4, who had been secured from the Child Saving institute of Omaha by Mr. and Mrs. Will Cole, well-known farmers, residing south of the city, and who had begun adoption proceedings in the county court.

The mother alleges that when she placed her sons in the home at Omaha she did not realize that she was to relinquish all claim to them in the future; that she had been recently divorced from her husband, but since then had been married and was now able to give them a good home and a mother's care. Noted Author Tells How to Love Enemies

"We Should Adopt Motto 'Live and Let Live,'" Says Dr. Crothers in Omaha Address.

Dr. Samuel M. Crothers

Dr. Samuel M. Crothers of Cambridge, Mass., hailed as one of the most celebrated authors of this age, who is here to take an active part in the 43d annual conference of the Unitarian church, delivered from the program of the conference yesterday afternoon, by accepting an invitation from Superintendent of Schools Beveridge to address a gathering of Omaha high school and grade school teachers.

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted Dr. Crothers in the assembly room of the Central high school. After paying a glowing tribute to the author and welcoming him to Omaha on behalf of the educational bureau, Mr. Beveridge urged upon the audience of teachers the necessity of taking up the practice while the distinguished speaker would say:

Love Your Enemies.

"Your Enemies and How to Love Them," was the subject of Dr. Crothers' discourse, setting forth in fitting language the variance of attitudes that exist in one class of people toward another.

"Why is it," Dr. Crothers asked, "that there is such an antagonistic attitude toward the practice while the distinguished speaker would say: 'Love Your Enemies.'"

The course of true love between the president and the states never did run smooth, declared Dr. Crothers in his reference to the animosity that at all times exists between "advisors and advisees."

Concluding, Dr. Crothers made the remark that there is room in the world for all kinds of people, of different color, tastes, habits and ambitions, and what a happier world it would be if they would all adopt the motto: "Live and let live."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Mrs. Warner.

Omaha, Wis.—"Every month I had such pains in my back and lower part of stomach I could not lie in bed. I suffered so it seemed as though I would die and I was not regular either. I suffered for a year and was unable to do my housework, could only wash dishes once in a while. I read an advertisement of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women and decided to try it. It surely did wonders for me. I have no pains now and I can do my housework without any trouble at all. I will always praise your medicine as I do not believe there is a doctor that can do as much good in female weakness, and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. E. WARNER, R. 1, Box 69, Omaha, Wis.

Legion Remains Silent Upon Political Issues

commander then requested that each state having 15 votes or more appoint an assistant to the sergeant-at-arms. This gave McCoy 20 assistants. The subcommittee on anti-American propaganda was then directed by the national commander to go into session at 10:30.

The chair announced that debate on any subject would be limited to five minutes for each speaker and that no two delegates from any one department could take the floor on any one subject.

Aid Promised Bonus Bill.

The report of the committee on adjusted compensation was called for and when read started an uproar. The report recommended that "the American Legion give its unequalled approval of house bill No. 14157, which passed the house of representatives by a vote of 289 to 92 May 29, 1920, but was left pending before the senate and which provides for the optional plan of either: Adjusted service pay, based on length of service, or Adjusted service certificates maturing in 20 years, based on length of service, or Vocational training, or Land settlement, for which 31 states have already made, through their state legislatures, provisions for co-operation.

Will Urge Action.

The report directed the national executive committee to take such action as it may deem necessary to ensure prompt passage of the bill. A motion for adoption was carried. Delegate Tidings of Maryland then made a motion that the roll call by states be made in order that congress might see how overwhelmingly the motion had carried. Benson of Pennsylvania supported the motion, stating that "we should know where the opposition to this measure lies."

Kansas City in 1921.

This brought several delegates to their feet, notably Johnson of South Carolina and Abbott of Ohio. Each said he "resented very seriously the implication that my state was an enemy within the gates because it is opposed to the American Legion asking for a bonus." Tidings' motion was lost and the report as originally read and adopted was ordered recorded.

The committee on the time and place of next convention was called and it recommended that Kansas City, Mo., be given the convention on October 31, November 1 and 2, 1921. Garrett of Missouri moved the adoption of the report and it was carried. No other towns contested on the floor, but San Francisco, New York, Baltimore, Minot, N. D.; Houston, Tex., and Syracuse, N. Y., served notice that they would be in the running for the convention.
