

Harding for Enforcing of Prohibition

Laxity of Punishment of Violators Bitterly Scored by Nominee Who Urges Public Welfare Dept.

By The Associated Press.
Marion, O., Oct. 1.—Lax enforcement of prohibition was condemned "without qualification" today by Senator Harding in a front porch speech outlining a policy of organized federal effort for the promotion of social justice and welfare.

Addressing a gathering of women, the republican nominee proposed establishment of a "department of public welfare" in the national government and added that in his opinion law enforcement was one of the important requisites of social progress. "The enforcement of the law is an executive responsibility," he continued, "and must be undertaken by the executive without regard for his personal approval or disapproval of the law which it has been the people's will to enact. We must not consider without qualification the failure of enforcement of prohibition, just as we must not condemn the failure of established authority to prevent outrages of violence, such as lynching."

Wants Welfare Division.
In another part of the senator's speech he warned against assumption of too much authority by the federal government in welfare efforts and in other activities.

Sketching his conception of a new federal department, he said it might be formed in part by combining the various governmental bureaus now dealing with the different aspects of social welfare. He suggested that women should have an important part in the work of the department and mentioned maternity care, child welfare, public health, humane labor regulations and stable employment as questions involved in social betterment.

He also voiced his confidence that American women would stand with the republican party against the Versailles league of nations, but said "I refuse to make any emotional appeal to the hearts of the women of America."

The protection of motherhood of America cannot be accomplished until the state and the nation have enacted and, by their example, have induced customs, which protect womanhood itself," he said.

"Twelve million women in the United States, 40 per cent of them between 15 and 20 years of age, are engaged in paid occupations or professions. Such an army of potential maternity demands from America careful and adequate protection in the conditions which surround their labors."

"There is a growing and a probably wise sentiment in America in favor of an eight-hour day everywhere for women. Justice and American standards demand that women who are employed should be paid a living wage."

Praises Farm Women.
"I am hearing constantly voices raised in behalf of the women in industry. I desire to raise mine now in behalf of the women on the farms of the United States, who in the labor shortage of this year have gone into the fields. There must be labor, normal labor, available to farm as well as factory."

"The program to prevent abuses of child labor, already greatly advanced by republican efforts, represents the progress of legislation toward wise prevention, which will receive the sanction of constitutional law."

"Next to maternity and childhood, I believe that our attention must be centered upon our national health. We must attack, first, a low standard of health among children; secondly, the invasion of diseases which attend a low standard of morals; and thirdly, the invasion of epidemics and the neglect of the chronic diseases of maturity."

Abolish Unemployment.
"We are often presented with conditions which result in industrial controversy, but which may not be charged to either side. I speak specifically of two examples: the first involves the unrest, the discontent, which arises from unsteady employment. I am enough of an optimist to believe that government can assist in the abolition of this most unfortunate condition."

"I am even enough of an optimist to believe that the government can take a large part in a second, and perhaps, even more important campaign. I believe that many of our workers are engaged in tasks which have been so specialized that the men and women themselves have become almost pieces of mechanism. In such a condition, men and women are drained dry of the impulse to create."

In advancing his proposal of a new federal department, Senator Harding said:
"While others may have their eyes fixed upon some particular piece of legislation, or some particular policy of social justice which calls for the sympathetic interest of us all, I say, without hesitation, that our primary consideration must be the machinery of administrative government, and that when the time comes for us to reorganize our administration in Washington, we must all stand together for the creation of a department of public welfare."

Must Prevent Bureaucracy.
"It is almost useless for us to go on expending energy in advancing humanitarian policies which we wish put into effect, and it is useless for us to hope for the effective administration of humanitarian policies already undertaken by the federal government, until we have prepared to create the machinery for the application of our program."

Move Made "To Clean Up Base Ball Forever"

As a basis for proposed action, the signers of this letter have agreed to a preliminary plan and agree to put it into operation.

"The undersigners urge that the three most prominent men obtainable (in no wise connected with base ball) be obtained to act as a superior tribunal, and that such tribunal shall have unreviewable authority over presidents of all leagues, club owners, players and every other person, act or thing, connected with base ball."

"The mere knowledge of control of base ball by such men would insure that the public interests would be first served and that therefore all existing evils would disappear."

"It is proposed to appropriate the necessary expenses for this tribunal from a fund to be established by the league receipts. Paying these men higher salaries than any one connected with base ball receives would emphasize their authority and automatically attract men of the type desired."

"Everyone connected with base ball would be absolutely under control of this tribunal. If an owner committed an unethical act, the tribunal could reprimand him, fine him or even revoke his franchise."

"Likewise it would be empowered to establish a proper relationship between minor and major leagues."

"The conduct of the player upon the field, and the rules governing the games also will be subject to the final and arbitrary review and dictum of the tribunal."

"It is unthinkable that in such an environment and under such supervision, anything unclean or unsportsmanlike could even remotely creep into the national game."

The letter requests club owners to sign an enclosed memorandum and return it to Mr. Veck.

Grand Jury Investigates National League Contests
Chicago, Oct. 1.—The Cook county grand jury investigating the base ball scandal, today received further information concerning the throwing of games in last year's world series but devoted most of the day's sessions to an investigation of alleged crooked work in the National league.

William Veck, president of the Chicago National league club, told the jury that his private investigation of charges that the Philadelphia Athletics had fixed the game of August 31 had been fixed for Philadelphia to win, led him to believe that the club itself had been made the "sucker" in the case and other witnesses gave additional details of the activities which led to the discharge from base ball of Lee Magee and Hal Chase.

Veck said evidence he had found in Detroit convinced him there was no crooked work in the August 31 game. He said he believed the gamblers themselves had sent him telegrams received just before the game, saying it was "fixed" and that they had done this to make the club switch from Hendrix, a comparatively weak pitcher to Alexander, one of the best in the league. This gave Chicago its strongest possible line of defense, he said.

Herrmann on Stand.
Garry Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati club and formerly chairman of the National commission, presented affidavits from Christy Mathewson, former New York pitcher and Cincinnati manager, "Greasy" Neale, Cincinnati outfielder, Jimmy Ring, Cincinnati pitcher and Manager McGraw of the New York Giants. These affidavits, he said, absolutely proved the guilt of Chase and Magee.

Interest in the American league side of the scandal was kept up by the return of McClay Hoyle, state's attorney, from New York with evidence which he said would help in criminal prosecution of players and gamblers indicted.

"We investigated for some time and while we found enough to convince us the series was not on the square we found nothing on which to base legal action," said Mr. Hoyle.

Clyde Elliott, another witness, verified the previous testimony concerning a trip by William (Kid) Gleason, White Sox manager, to St. Louis in an attempt to get evidence that the world series was not straight.

"Buck" Weaver, Fred McMullin and "Swede" Risberg, three of the eight White Sox players indicted, declared they are innocent and would fight the case in court.

It was reported that the jury had received evidence that considerable betting was done in Kansas City this year on a Cleveland-Chicago game, but no testimony proving crookedness by anyone in this connection was received, according to an official in the state attorney's office.

Expect Arrest Soon in Denton Murder Mystery

Detectives on New Trail Following Discovery of Charred Bundle of Clothing and Chauffeur's Badge.

Los Angeles, Oct. 1.—An arrest within a few hours in connection with the mysterious murder of Jacob Charles Denton, whose body was found hidden in the cellar of his mansion of Catalina street last week, was predicted by police detectives today.

This prediction followed the discovery by detectives that a bundle of clothing had been burned by hooded men, and a chauffeur's badge been found back of a house occupied by James W. Crowhurst, a plumber, who recently made an amazing statement in which he charged that Mrs. R. C. Peete, formerly Denton's housekeeper, had ordered him to board up the secret chamber where Denton's body later was discovered.

Mrs. Peete's disappearance from her Denver home was denied today. She is thought to be on her way to Los Angeles.

Boy Gives Tip.
The story of the burned clothes was told by a 14-year-old boy who found the badge and charred bundle after he had seen a weird group of men, their faces concealed by shawls, surrounding a mysterious bonfire.

The badge bore a Colorado number and was identical with two other badges found at the Catalina street house and said to have been left there by Mrs. Peete.

A woman testified today that she found a blood stained bundle of clothing in the same neighborhood as that described by the boy. She said she attempted to wash out the blood stains but failing, burned the clothes.

Another singular and interesting disclosure was to the effect that before his death Denton confided to J. E. Metcalf, an intimate friend, that he feared he was going to be murdered. Metcalf was with Denton the day before that on which he is supposed to have been slain.

Metcalf stated further that Denton told him just before his death that he was planning a trip to Kansas City. According to a furniture repair man, it was learned today, Mrs. Peete, on August 18, brought to him a Morris chair and a dining room table to be repaired. They were broken, she said, "in a party."

This and other bits of evidence lead the police to the conclusion that the death of Denton followed violence.

Wind Around Mrs. Peete.
The "man with his arm in a sling" appeared in evidence again today. It was learned that when Mrs. Peete presented checks to bank officials she said that Denton's signature on the checks was unusual because Denton had injured his arm. The bank sent out an investigator who reported he had found a man believed to be Denton, with his arm in a sling, in the arms of the body recovered from the Catalina street residence were discovered to be in perfect condition save for a trace of an old fracture.

Dr. Cartnell of Seligman, Ariz., told the district attorney's office today he had attended Denton in 1914 when an arm was fractured. This lends additional evidence that the dead body really was Denton's.

Tear Open Walls.
Detectives of the district attorney's office today ripped open walls and floorings of the house in the cellar of which the body of Jacob Charles Denton, mining promoter, was found buried a week ago. The object of today's search and the result were kept secret.

A development announced by the police was the discovery that two checks drawn in the name of J. C. Denton were cashed at a bank in which the promoter had an account, a few days after his supposed disappearance. The checks were presented by a woman, it was stated, and their total was within a few dollars of the balance Denton had in the bank.

Co-Operative Company Granted Permission For Big Stock Issue
Lincoln, Oct. 1.—(Special.)—Official authority for the issuance and sale of $1,000,000 in stock of the National Co-Operative company, with headquarters at Omaha, has been given by the state bureau of securities. The company is headed by C. H. Gustafson and its directors are prominent farmers' union men.

The plan outlined provides that the company will sell its stock to local cooperative companies and associations, which will market the grain of their members through it, and the profits of the central corporation will be distributed among the stockholders in the usual manner.

Mr. Gustafson said as much of the proceeds of the stock sales as may be necessary will be used for capital to develop the business. Two and one-half per cent is the limit allowed for expenses of organizing the company and selling the stock, under the bureau's order. No commissions are to be paid on stock sales. Some time ago the company was incorporated with $15,000 of initial capital, and the new issue of a $1,000,000 is additional to that sum.

Senior, Wyoming, Neb., was arraigned here and pleaded not guilty. His case was set for hearing October 20, and he was released on $4,000 bonds. Senior charged Bevard with fraud and misrepresentation in the sale of the stock, which he says is worthless.

Cox Is Bitterly Scored by Man at Methodist Meet

"Loose, Low and Liquid, Champion of Laxist Enforcement Regime Ohio Ever Had," Is Charge.

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 1.—Politics were injected very forcibly into yesterday's session of the Rock River conference of the Methodist Episcopal church when Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the national board of temperance, prohibition and public morals, spoke upon "the present situation," discussing prohibition, Americanization, the Bible in public schools, protection of Americans engaged in outlawed business in foreign countries and gambling crusades.

Governor Cox is "loose, low and liquid," he said, "the champion of the liquor interests, the advocate of the laxist enforcement regime that Ohio has ever known." Dr. Wilson also accredited the democratic candidate with responsibility for the prize fighting wave that is spreading all over the country.

Many objections were raised by the clergymen to Dr. Wilson's partisan statements. He stated that Senator Harding was the last republican he wanted for a candidate but with "Harding 90 per cent dry and with Cox 100 per cent wet, I have no choice in the matter and you ministers should not have a doubt how to vote or inform your congregations which is the right side."

William Jennings Bryan will make the sixth floor of the new national headquarters building of the Methodist Episcopal church his Washington home, Dr. Wilson announced.

The lecture was part of the program of the ninth annual congress of the national safety council.

Lindsey and Heney Democrats in 1916

No Surprise Occasioned by Support Given Cox by Former Bull Moosers.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 1.—(Special Telegram.)—Before leaving Havre, Mont., on his northwestern speaking tour, Col. Raymond Robbins gave out this statement in reply to the Harold Ikes announcement of yesterday that Ben Lindsey, Francis Heney and 13 other conspicuous progressives had come out for Cox:

"Judge Ben Lindsey and Francis Heney swinging to Cox is much as when Holland swings to the Dutch. Both supported Mr. Wilson in 1916 and each has been identified with the Wilson administration, one as a pair attorney and the other as a privileged writer and traveler in support of Wilson policies. Judge Lindsey never quite forgave the progressives for not nominating him for vice president in 1912 and Mr. Heney has never recovered from his defeat by the progressives of California as a candidate for the United States senate in 1914."

"Intelligent progressives who are interested in what other progressives are doing in this campaign will be surprised to find that Lindsey and Heney are doing it. Lindsey is a member of the California, Dixon and Shelly of Montana, Howell and Corrick of Nebraska, Allen and White of Kansas, McCormick and Knight of Illinois, Beveridge and Toner of Indiana, Garfield, Garford and Towner of Ohio, Von Valkenburg, Moore and Lewis of Pennsylvania, Davenport, Hooker and Wilkerson of New York and hundreds of other leading progressives who kept faith with Theodore Roosevelt while he lived and now support Senator Harding rather than those who abandoned Roosevelt's leadership for the man who kept us out of war and who was too proud to fight."

Warnings Ignored By President Wilson

dent with the national necessity justifying him in shaping his course to achieve this object.

Evidently realizing, however, that there was question of either the disposition or ability of the president to prevent Japan from securing possession of all the three groups of islands, the naval board specially stressed the desirability of the United States obtaining some of the more important, if not all of the archipelago, at the southern extremity of which lies Guam.

Near Japanese Shore.
So close is Guam to the southernmost Japanese island of the Ladrone group that the American base easily could be bombarded by Japanese airplanes operating from shore stations.

When the memorandum was prepared, the general board had high hopes that the president would achieve nothing short of a division of the islands between Japan and the United States.

The board also pointed out the importance of the United States acquiring the island of Yap, a cable station lying southeast of Guam, and constituting a link in American communication with the Philippines.

Mr. Wilson's statement that the general board's memorandum had been published has puzzled naval officers. It could not be recalled by Admiral Benson, a member of the board at the time, nor by Admiral Long, now chief of naval intelligence, both of whom were in Paris, nor by Admiral Badger, acting chairman of the board, who declined to discuss what was intended to be confidential advice to the president on national defense.
