of nine persons in 10 years.

The preliminary announcement of the population of Alliance, Neb., of 4.591, has created a panic in that thriving city in Box Butte county and the Chamber of Commerce, through Judge Kinkaid, has shown gross inaccuracy in the enumeration. So strong have these representations been from the leading business men of Alliance that the director of the Chamber of Commerce to recount the people in the city which will be checked up with the supervisor's report on the Sixth district.

Judge Kinkaid, in a letter to the director of the census, showed the importance of a recount in Alliance, its position in city classification depending on a re-enumeration and its ability to issue bonds for municipal improvements hanging on the place it will receive under state law.

The census of Box Butte county is given as 6,407.
