What's What

By HELEN DECIE.

Characteristically, the dowager with the forquette appears to be showing disapproval of the young showwoman who has been instructed to be pleasant to all customers, and who, probably, resents inwardly and equally the unwarranted familiarity of the young man and the critical contempt of the older woman. If the other customer were the woman's mother he would not dare to act thus in her presence; in his concerted assumption of the gay Lothario role, he is merely showing disrespect to both women.

Crete Club Holds Celebration of Anniversary

On Wednesday, September 29, the Wednesday club of Crete celebrated the 35th anniversary of its organization by a banquet in the First Congregational church parlors. This club began in September, 1885, as the Social Literary club with a charter membership of about 20 members, of whom Miss Alice Eyster and Mrs. Z. Waterman are still in active membership.

In 1900 the name was changed to Wednesday club. It has always been a study club, its interests ranging widely during these many years, over the field of authors, art, architecture, sculpture, music, politics and current subjects of interest. During the world war the club was largely devoted to work for the Red Cross, the supporters were greatly simplified and a French orphan is still maintained.

Invitations for the celebration were sent out to all former members over the country and many responses were received, from Texas, California, Ohio, New York, Illinois, Oregon, Utah and points nearer home. Mrs. G. M. Gispinger of Lodi, Cal., sent for the occasion a box of delicious Tokay grapes, which were greatly enjoyed by the company of 40 or more gathered around the tables.

The tables were decorated with nasturtiums and autumn foliage and flowers were around the rooms. The menu and place cards were booklets, hand painted by Mrs. G. N. Venrick, with autumn leaves and the club monograms. The toast list was composed of appropriate quotations from Browning, and Mrs. A. E. Sheldon of Lincoln, presided. Responses were made by Mesdames J. N. Bennett, R. Jacobsen, E. G. Stancliff and H. N. Kinney, while G. N. Venrick humorously described the woes of the club husband and darkly predicted a speedy reward in heaven for his trials here on club day. Mr. E. Stancliff sang two numbers, one of which was a selection from Browning. Mrs. A. T. Andrews, president of the club, introduced Mrs. Sheldon with a clever toast and a rhyme.

After the program everybody was called upon for a few remarks. Messages from former members were read by Mrs. G. A. Gregory, the secretary. Mrs. A. A. Reed led in singing old songs, ending with "Auld Lang Syne."

Those present were Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Sheldon, Prof. and Mrs. A. A. Reed, Lincoln; Rev. and Mrs. V. F. Clark of Beatrice, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Butler of Omaha, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Denison of Friend, Prof. and Mrs. G. A. Gregory, Rev. and Mrs. W. D. King, Attorney and Mrs. G. N. Venrick, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Kinney, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Weckbach, Mr. and Mrs. R. Do You Know---V

Three Questions a Day for the Housewife. 1. Why is unpolished rice better than polished rice? 2. The easiest way to prepare dry bread crumbs. 3. How can a grease spot be removed from wall paper? (These questions will be answered tomorrow by the Housewife.) Answers to Sunday's Questions. 1. People who depend on rice for their chief cereal do not make bread of it because it is lacking in gluten necessary for raising. 2. For young children prunes should be cooked until soft, as much as possible and much of the dark skin removed and the remaining pulp thoroughly mashed or put through a coarse wire sieve. 3. It is best to remove eggs from pasteboard container after purchasing as they are apt to absorb the flavor of the paper. (Copyright, 1920, By the McClure newspaper Syndicate.)
