By ARTHUR SEARS HENNING. Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Leased Wire. Washington, Oct. 7.-That the division of the American navy into the Atlantic and Pacific fleets is a strategic blunder that would prove costly, if not disastrous to the nation in the event of war with a first-class power, is the opinion of Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, recognized as the foremost American authority on the science of naval warfare.

"What is your opinion of the wisdom of the division of the navy-I asked him at the beginning of an interview I sought with him today.
"If you will consult my book on the 'Art of Fighting,'" replied the admiral, "you will observe from my statement of the principles of war-fare that I could not hold any opinion, but that the policy is an unwise

"Our aim ought to be to maintain our fleet as a single highly-trained unit, capable of striking quickly with utmost strength in the event of war. That is the safest, surest way to victory, with the least sacrifice of life and material. Unless the navy be maintained in that high state of training and efficiency, it cannot help rendering a costly account of itself, in men and ships, in the event of war, besides gravely jeopardizing a successful outcome.

Unit Drill Necessary. "No matter how continuously each fleet of our widely divided navy be trained in time of peace, no matter how many plans are laid out on paerring functioning of all parts of the great machine that come only from constant drilling as one unit. An annual reunion of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets for a few weeks' of drill cannot possibly suffice. Experience has shown that a year is all too short a time in which to carry out the exercises and manuvers necessary that officient as essary to make a fleet efficient as an actual fighting machine. It would be an accommodating enemy, indeed, that would allow us a year, or even six or three months, for this purpose."

"It is urged," I suggested, "that out history, as I have shown in his escape from the Joliet pentienmy book," replied Admiral Fiske, tiary where he was a prison barber. "It is a principle, the soundness of which is regarded by all authorities on strategy today.
