

Gov. McKelvie Talks to Women Voters of Omaha

Republican Doctrines Are Expounded and Work of Last State Legislature Is Explained.

Governor McKelvie faced 500 Omaha club women in the ball room of the Hotel Fontenelle yesterday afternoon and expounded republican doctrines to the new voters. The governor was introduced by Mrs. Draper Smith, well known suffrage worker, who in her introductory remarks emphasized the fact that women should give more thanks to republicans than democrats for pushing equal suffrage to the foreground.

The governor told the women they had much power in their own votes and in switching the votes of their husbands and loved ones.

"Just to show you what one good republican woman can do, I'll refer to my own family history," said the governor. "My father was a democrat and my mother was a republican. They argued more about politics than anything else. Four of the five boys turned out republicans and the four of us finally converted the fifth to be a republican."

Governor McKelvie lauded moral cleanliness in politics, which, he asserted, would result with the entrance of women.

"And I wish to call attention to the fact that the republican party is built on moral bulwarks, such as women should wish to stand upon," the governor declared.

Continuing he reviewed the work of the last legislature in passing the suffrage amendment, providing for a civil administrative code, creating a labor department, placing labor on a par with all other organizations, providing an appropriation for a new state house at Lincoln and giving Omaha appointments to citizens "standing for high moral integrity in the city."

Car Shortage and Low Prices Causing Critical Situation

The freight car shortage and low credit prices of grain and live stock, resulting in a broken market, is causing the most critical time in the history of agriculture, according to Hugh F. McIntosh, manager of the agricultural bureau of the Chamber of Commerce.

With yearlings selling today for the same price that they would have brought a year ago, after carrying the expense of feeding them all winter, labor's wages mounting, and difficulty in obtaining it, and the car shortage worrying the farmers in addition, it is small wonder the farmers are leaving for the city where they can engage in more profitable business, local financiers say. In substantiating their remarks they point to the decrease in a number of the farming counties' population.

Attorney Arrested On Speeding Charge Clashes With Police

Ernest A. Conaway, 5117 Burt street, attorney, clashed with Police Judge Foster and Policeman Harry Rogers yesterday morning when arraigned for speeding and reckless driving, and the atmosphere of the courtroom was filled with angry words and sharp reports by the principals.

Conaway, according to Rogers, disregarded the signal to stop after the former had broken the traffic rules at Twenty-fourth and Farnam streets, and Rogers was forced to pursue him in a passing automobile without being able to overtake him. When Rogers testified to this effect yesterday, it brought a flow of wrath from Conaway, who charged the policeman with prevaricating. Conaway was fined $250 and costs and immediately appealed the case to the district court.

Caruso Spends Hour in Omaha Station While En Route to Denver

Signor Enrico Caruso, world-famed Italian tenor, spent an hour in Omaha Thursday while en route to Denver, where he sang last night.

It was not Omaha's final glimpse of Signor Caruso, for he is to return to grace the Auditorium on October 12.

He was to have been whisked away to the comfortable quarters of a hotel and three taxicabs were waiting at the station to convey him and his party there and enable him to rest his temperamental hoarses. But the train had arrived late and time was at a premium, so the signor contented himself with remaining at the station.

His aristocratic bearing was matched by attire of the latest fashion.
