Caruso and a packed Auditorium just like the Metropolitan Opera both the boy and the man were house itself upon gala occasions armed with knives. when the great tenor sings—this Young Westover sighted the burg-was the state of affairs on Tuesday lar in the dining room on his reevening, when the world's most tamous tenor, Enrico Caruso, appeared in Omaha in concert, assisted by Alice Miriam, soprano, and Albert sessel, violinist, under the management of the Metropolitian Musical bureau and the local auspices of the Mickel Brothers com-

The great Municipal auditorium was taxed to capacity for this event, since the opportunity of hearing Caruso in concert is not offered to this community often, although he has appeared here before in opera, several years ago.

It seemed as if all Omaha was there, and a generous sprinkling of the countrymen of the great Iitalian was noted in the vast audience Everyone was intent upon hearing every note of the interesting pro-gram, and the resultant applause was so general and enthuisastic as to be a marked tribute to the artists. Caruso is essentially an operation tenor. He is dramatic in the highest degree and he excels in the big broad strokes which make the song stand forth with color and life and give force to his interpretations. The wide range of his voice with continuous beauty from the full low tones to the wonderful luscious high ones, its marvelous power and brilliancy, and his ample techwith ease and skill, all gave the greatest delight to the audience, which listened breathlessly, only to
