A Survey of the MOTOR INDUSTRY

PRICE reductions by leading automobile manufacturers is the natural consequence of contraction of public demand.

Over-expansion by many companies, credit restrictions and general reaction in business has brought the automobile industry companies face to face with another readjustment.

Prices of new cars are being reduced by 10 to 20 per cent, and the industry is feeling the effect of growing pains.

Out of the slump the stronger organizations will come forth stronger than ever.

With the idea of pointing out such companies as are securely entrenched in diversified business and standard product.
