The Bee's Short Story

CARLOTTA IS THRILLED

By LILY WANDEL.

Carlotta sighed, half happily, half regretfully. She was to be married next day at 11 o'clock in the morning; it was just 7 now, the beginning of her last evening of single life. And it promised to be the counterpart of all the evenings of her life as far back as she could remember—a nice quiet evening reading or sewing, or a lukewarm pleasant time with some friends. There was not one evening in her whole life that stood out vitally, that sent little thrills down her spine or made her pulse beat the least bit faster when she thought of it.

She stretched out her young, well formed arms in a little gesture of longing and impatience, not for the morrow to come, but for the tiresome evening to end. It flashed through her mind that she had been denied the exciting moment when a man proposes, for Leslie, living at a distance, had done his courting and proposing by mail. It had come about so very gradually that when a letter arrived asking her to be his wife there had not been the least gasp of surprise.

She had met him last summer on her vacation in the mountains, where he had been staying with his invalid mother. There had not been the faintest suggestion of courtship then, not as much as a walk without his mother. And Leslie did not dance, Carlotta could not remember that he had ever touched her hand except to shake hands when they said goodby.

His mother had opened the correspondence and when rheumatism prevented her writing her son had taken it over for her. Not till after his mother's death did his letters become gradually more intimate, and even after they were formally engaged there were no thrilling love phrases. Yet Carlotta knew from the sincere words he wrote that he loved her truly and would make a devoted and faithful husband. She remembered how kind and considerate he had been of his mother, she knew she could always depend upon him and above all, there was no doubt in her heart that she loved him.

Her life, as she reviewed it now, had been a drab-colored affair, not unhappy, rather pleasant but dull. A quiet, even childhood and girlhood, then the passing of her parents, her coming to the city, obtaining a position as secretary to a philanthropist, a pleasant, unexciting occupation. She made friends easily, she never was lonely, had plenty of invitations from nice people. It had all been so pale-colored, so even, just bordering on monotony. "Carlotta is so refined, always calm and collected," she had overheard a friend say. It was true, she confessed to herself, it was what attracted Leslie to her.

Sse realized that her married life would be a replica of her placid single existence. Leslie had pictured the sleepy little village, his old dignified home, the regular routine of his work and pleasures to her in his well written letters.

Carlotta rose, went to the window and looked down in the street below, studied the faces of passers-by. She searched eagerly for the features that expressed emotion, showed excitement. The calm, refined, dignified types did not interest her.

"Here I have lived five years in this great metropolis and its life has never touched me! I could have lived in a drowsy little village for all the thrills I get! "Just for the fun of it I'd like to see how I look with hair in buns over the ears and—"

A half hour later Carlotta viewed herself again. "Carlotta Pellem, Oh, you wicked girl! You do look five years younger, but oh, so tempting." It was the truth, she looked like another person, a very roguish, attractive girl. She then donned her best hat and tilted it coquettishly over one ear. She admired the result in the mirror very much and laughed and flirted with her pretty reflection. Then suddenly, "What if I went out like this—I wonder if I would have some excitement?"

Then she remembered that it was her very last chance for some thrills. Tomorrow was her wedding day. With a reckless little laugh she found her gloves and decided to try it and see what would happen.

A little later she was on the city's fashionable promenade, the natural glow of excitement on her cheeks quite out-doing the rouge she had dabbed on. She stepped buoyantly along in the ever-flowing stream of people, no definite destination in mind, conscious of men giving her tentative glances. She was slightly frightened by their advances, not quite sure if she could control a situation that her answering smile might bring.

Near a large hotel she noticed a broad shouldered man, strangely familiar, he turned—she would have passed across the avenue to be enveloped by a protecting crowd but he recognized her at once and came forward with wide-open, amazed eyes, embarrassed.

Carlotta would have willingly had the street open and engulf her than meet Leslie in her adventurous masquerade. She could see the mortification in his eyes.

"Oh Leslie," she managed to choke out between dry lips, "I thought you were not coming in till morning?"

He made some kind of an incoherent reply and fell in step with her.

In silence they walked along; she felt the stern disapproval, his disappointment. Almost frantically she tried to pull her hat to a straight, sober line, but in vain, it was pinned fast. She longed to rub the red from her lips and cheeks with her handkerchief, but feared to mortify her fiance still more. She glanced sideways at him, he looked away—he was ashamed of her!

The blood rushed to her face, her heart pounded, she caught the reflection of her face in a shop mirror. She was excited, wildly excited, her eyes shone like stars! Thrilled, excited, that did not express how she felt. She saw her wedding day fade away, the lovely home in the village gone, all the tender, happy, little intimate plans never materialized, everything lost! Lost, her life's happiness for the sake of a silly idea, a whim. Hot, repentant tears filled her eyes, but it was all too late. Any minute Leslie would speak. She knew quite well what he would say.

"Carlotta," little chills ran down her spine when he spoke, "I can see you did not expect me. I have embarrassed you by coming sooner than I wrote I would. It was a sudden whim, Carlotta." He stopped and she walked, trembling with emotion and tense expectation, at his side, dreading to hear what he would say next.

"How can I explain, tell you? I had no intention of looking you up tonight, Carlotta. I was restless, I longed for excitement, something different from the even, sober years of my whole life—Carlotta, can you forgive me? I realize now how utterly foolish."

She snuggled her hand through his arm and whispered happily, "Leslie, I understand, dear! Let us two have a little party—how about going to a roof garden?"

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 14.—(Word of the first arrest in connection with threats made against cotton gins in Georgia reached here from Carrollton, where it was reported W. J. Hicks had been released on $500 bond charged with posting notices warning gins to close.

Hicks was reported to have boasted that he was head of "50 men who took orders from him and that the government was afraid to interfere with them." It was added that he had been indicted and that Sheriff A. Garrett had offered $500 reward for arrest and conviction of persons posting gin signs in Carroll county.

Lavaca, Ark., Oct. 14.—Warned to close down their properties for "60 days" or until "the price gets right," owners of two cotton gins here suspended operations at the two presses.

Pine Bluff, Ark., Oct. 14.—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a cotton gin and 30 bales of cotton at Noble Lake, 10 miles east of here, causing a loss estimated at $25,000. The owners expressed the belief that the blaze was caused by sparks from a passing locomotive.

Late Mrs. Tom Thumb's Effects Sold at Auction

Middleboro, Mass., Oct. 14.—The auctioneers hammer was raised over the Lilliputian effects of the late Countess Lavinia Margri, who, as Mrs. Tom Thumb, one of the famous dwarf couple, was known on two continents. Old age, illness and an admitted lack of funds, caused her second husband, Count Magri, himself a dwarf, to offer the tiny furnishings of their home and the gowns and jewels of his wife for sale. He plans to end his years at his birthplace in Bologna, Italy.

Number of Americans Still Held in Soviet Russia

Washington, Oct. 14.—Between 25 and 30 Americans still are held in soviet Russia. State department officials said that considerable difficulty was being encountered in getting the facts regarding these Americans. The identity of some of them has not yet been established.

Immigrants in 1920 Mainly From British Isles

Bureau Issues Table Showing Arrivals and Departures of Aliens, Not by Counties, But by Stock.

(BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.)

Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Leased Wire.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Forty-five per cent of the increase in population through alien immigration in 1920 was made up of English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh. These groups did not come all from the British Isles, for the figures include those coming from Canada, which was an important contributor, but they serve to indicate the changes now progressing in the sources of our immigration.

Up to 20 years or so ago the peoples of western and northern Europe predominated in the tides that washed up to Ellis Island. Then southern and eastern Europe became the great source of the mixture for the melting pot. During the fiscal year ended last June 30, western Europe swung back to a place it had not held for a generation or more as the source whence originated the bulk of our alien increase

Today was issued what the bureau of immigration designates a "table by races," showing the increase or decrease in population by arrival and departure of aliens for 1920, not by countries but by stocks. The statistics run up to July 1 and they include both immigrant and non-immigrant classes, the latter defined as those who do not migrate for permanent residences. They show the following:

Races making net gains 1920:

African	10,206
Armenian	2,285
Bohemian	232
Dutch and Flemish	9,796
English	48,379
French	23,748
German	3,688
Hebrew	16,140
Irish	16,641
Italian, north	3,592
Italian, south	24,087
Japanese	521
Mexican	57,238
Portugese	10,193
Russian	1,519
Scandinavian	4,730
Scotch	21,370
Spanish	30,728
Spanish-American	3,497
Syrian	1,650
Welsh	1,699
West Indian (except Cuba)	961

Races making a net decrease in 1920:

Bulgarian, Serbian and Montenegrin	22,902
Chinese	363
Croatian and Slovenian	6,529
Dalmatian	1,523
Finnish	174
Greek	6,843
Lithuanian	279
Magyar	14,521
Polish	5,165
Roumanian	20,659
Slovak	6,850
Turkish	1,318

The total admitted, immigrant and non-immigrant, was 621,278; total departed 428,062, making the net decrease in population 193,514.

Central City Man Offers 3 to 1 Odds on Harding

Central City, Neb., Oct. 14.—(Special.)—So strong are his convictions that Harding will carry the state of Ohio, R. Peck, lifelong republican, has offered to bet $300 against $100 that Harding will carry the state. Mr. Peck, who now resides at this place, is a native of Ohio.

Omahan and Wife Held Up on Trip

Bandits Take Over $300 From Joseph Lewis on Road in Pennsylvania.

Greensburg, Pa., Oct. 14.—(Special Telegram.)—Word reached here that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lewis of Omaha, on their way to Washington, D. C., by motor, were held up and robbed at the point of a revolver on a lonely road near Adamsburg, five miles north of here.

Mr. Lewis was driving the machine when an automobile bearing a New York license plate, containing two men, passed him. One of the men left the machine a short distance down the road and stopped Lewis. Representing himself as a state inspector, he demanded that Mr. Lewis show his license to drive the car.

In order to prevent a tieup of traffic Mr. Lewis drove his car to the side of the road and a minute later was ordered to drive onto a road leading from the Lincoln highway. The Omaha man complied. While one of the bandits held the revolver the other searched Lewis and his wife. The latter fainted during the ordeal.

Over $300 was taken from Lewis. Jewelry worn by himself and Mrs. Lewis, was untouched. Following the robbery Lewis drove to Greensburg and notified the state police.

Anti-Saloon League Submits Question to National Candidates

Washington, Oct. 14.—The Anti-saloon league announced they had submitted identical questions to Senator Harding and Governor Cox to develop their attitude regarding the modification of the Volstead prohibition act.

The message embodying the question read:

"Will you, if elected, favor or oppose modification of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture or sale or beer and wine or increase the alcoholic content, thus rendering the enforcement of the 18th amendment more difficult?"

Senator Harding's reply said:

"My record vote for the submission of the 18th amendment and law to enforce it answers your telegram. I stand by that record made in the public service."

While no reply had been received from Governor Cox, the nominee's secretary answered that he would endeavor to present the inquiry to the democratic candidate.

Military Instructor Detailed To University of Nebraska

Washington, Oct. 14.—(Special Telegram.)—By direction of the president, First Lieut. James H. Hagan, infantry, is relieved from duty at Camp Funston, Kan., and detailed as assistant professor of military science and tactics at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.

Capt. Noble Carter, quartermaster corps, is relieved from duty at Fort Crook, Neb., upon the arrival of Capt. William H. Dukes, quartermaster corps, and will then proceed to Washington.

Little Danger of Coal Shortage During Winter

Need of Open Cars Greatest Hindrance to Production At Present Time, Operators Say.

New York, Oct. 14.—There will be no serious coal shortage in any part of the country this year, provided ordinary care is exercised by consumers, it was predicted here today at the conference of the National Coal association, which comprises two-thirds of the bituminous coal producers of the United States.

The operators, however, declared that in order to keep the markets supplied, steady work at the mines and sufficient supply of railway cars also would be required.

At this time, it was stated, bituminous operators were getting only about 25 to 30 per cent of the open top cars needed.

A special committee, which has been working with various co-operative agencies to prevent a winter fuel shortage, reported that the Interstate Commerce commission, railways, big coal dealers and others, were co-operating to increase production and improve transportation and distribution facilities.

In order that the northwest may be protected, an emergency order, similar to that provided for New England deliveries last year, has been applied; it was made known.

The Interstate Commerce commission has requested the railways to move 4,000 cars of coal a day into that territory until December. These movements, it was said, are capable of putting into that section 200,000 tons of coal a day, but up to last week the railways fell short of the specified number of cars. The railway men and Interstate Commerce commission then held a meeting and assurance was given that between now and December 1 the northwest will receive 4,000 cars of coal daily.

When the northwest is supplied, the operators and railways will then be in a position to supply other sections of the country before the extreme cold weather begins, it was said. The most serious shortage now is in the middlewest, the operators said, but domestic consumers, through a systematic distribution, are getting enough coal to meet their demands.

Elects Officers.

Franklin, Neb., Oct. 14.—(Special).—The annual meeting of the Franklin County Farmers' union was held in Franklin. The following officers were elected: President, A. C. Imhoff, Upland; vice president, F. G. Mason, Upland; secretary-treasurer, C. W. Bauer, Hildred; directors, Mart Hanson, A. T. Ready and Harry Anderson.

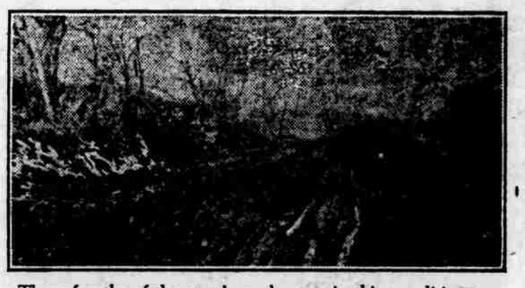
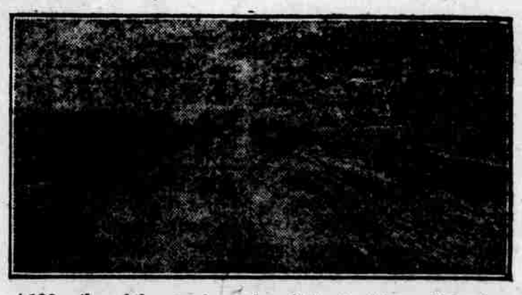
A Good Road to Every Farmer's Door!

Is this Extravagance?



Three-fourths of the state's roads were in this condition two years ago.



4,508 miles of the state's roads will be in this condition by 1921 if the work of the present administration is continued.

NEBRASKA'S present road-building program calls for the immediate construction of 4,508 miles of state highways. 65% of the people live on these highways. 85% of the people live within five miles of them.

THIS system of state-constructed and state-maintained highways (built in co-operation with the federal government) is the foundation of a network of good roads that will ultimately extend to every citizen's front door.

Do You Want this Work Continued?

If so, Vote for Governor McKelvie for Re-election!
