

The Extra Blanket For Cooler Nights

Now that the days grow shorter and the nights cooler, the problem of what to do with the extra blanket is the most troublesome one in all my housekeeping," declared one young matron. And yet that extra blanket can so easily be disposed of that its presence need never be suspected during the day, yet at night it is most convenient.

For example, it may have a cretonne or silk cover that just matches the hangings of the bedroom in which it is placed. And such a cover may be cut on any one of several interesting patterns. A square of cretonne, with a strip as long as the folded comforter is wide, projecting from the middle of each of two of its opposite sides makes a good cover. The folded comforter is placed on it, and rolled tightly; the long strips are then brought over it and buttoned to each other, and the square of material wrapped smoothly around it and buttoned on what will be the under side of the cover.

A triangular-shaped cover can be used—a double one, of course—if the comforter is folded into a square and then into a triangle; the edges of this cover fasten together with loops and buttons.

For Beef Hash

Spanish sweet peppers and onions added to beef and potato hash give variety to the dish. Serve on slices of toast with a poached egg on top of each.

Celestial Crullers

In making crullers or doughnuts

ous sprinkling of grated lemon or orange peel, with the spice usually included. It gives a delicious flavor that will set your friends to wondering what makes them different. A high school lad, whose mother recently tried this recipe, rewarded her by the following comment: "What'd you do to the doughnuts?" "Are they good?" "Good! Gee, they've got wings on 'em this time."
