Singer Who Introduced Famous "Pretty Baby" Number Married to Son of Prominent Omaha Merchant.

The secret marriage of Lewis H. Burgess, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ward M. Burgess of Omaha, and Rose Mary Quinn, better known in the theatrical world as "Rosie" Quinn, who introduced the song "Pretty Baby" in the 1916 Winter Garden show at the Palace Music hall in Chicago, was reveoled yesterday.

Young Burgess and Miss Quinn were married in New York three months ago. The ceremony was the culmination of a love affair which started when Mrs. Burgess appeared in Chicago in a Winter Garden show four years ago. four years ago.

Mrs. Burgess sang "Won't You Be My Daddy," and "Won't You Write to Me," in a most appealing manner during her presence here in the same show and wore her golden curls in the same captivating fashion which has entranced patrons of the Cen-tury Roof Garden in New York this Young Burgess later renewed his courtship of the girl who became his wife in New York while serving during the war on one of the "mosquito Omaha railroad men received a call boats" which patroled the east coast Monday from Everett C. Brown. for German submarines. During his "land leaves" young Burgess showered the young actress with attentions and presents, and "staged" many parties for her, friends say. The marriage was so secret that even members of voung Burgess's family were completely surprised. Charles Burgess, brother of Lewis asked Monday concerning rumors of the affair, denied any knowledge
