A Story Worth While

Not all the real heroes of war wear a Distinguished Service medal. Most of the real heroes of peace are unknown, unhonored and unsung.

One writer put it well when he said that "heroes in history seem to us poetic because they are there, but if we should tell the simple truth of some of our neighbors it would sound like poetry." That's only another way of saying the world is full of unseen good.

Every time we open our eyes to the "great, golden stuff" that is in men we are happier and broader and better men ourselves. We were all affected by the story of the little Omaha boy, Theodore Welsh. He was a mere baby of 7 years, but he suffered injuries from which he died rather than obey an order to steal.

That's a story worth while! It's worth telling to the children. It deserves a place in the business man's luncheon talk. Its broader meaning will be better understood when we think of it in connection with Charles Reade's statement: "Not a day passes over the earth but men and women of no note do great deeds, speak great words and suffer noble sorrows. Of these obscure heroes, philosophers and martyrs, the greater part will never be known till that hour when many that were great shall be small and the small great."
