

True Meaning of Humane Society Told by Member

Head of Massachusetts Body Denounces Cruelty to Animals Before Lions' Club.

Dr. Francis Rawley, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, in an address before the weekly luncheon of the Lions' club at Hotel Rome yesterday, said that people in general do not know the true meaning of humane society work. They associate the word humane wholly with the prevention of cruelty to animals, he asserted. This is but a part of the work of a humane society. It is the results obtained toward the uplift of morality and a realization of the need for compassion before business prosperity that is worth while, according to Dr. Rawley.

"There are three common modes of cruelty that are rarely brought to the public eye," continued Dr. Rawley. "The fur trade has created the most inhumane traffic in the world. One out of every 15 fur-bearing animals caught in steel traps gnaws off its imprisoned leg in their passion for life.

"Trick animals that so commonly amuse theater-goers, are taught their antics only through the greatest possible punishment. In order to discourage this form of cruelty, the Jack London club, with 150,000 members, has been formed. When the trained animal number appears on the stage, members of this organization leave the audience until the act is over.

"Over 40,000,000 meat animals are slaughtered annually. Thirty per cent of the cattle, 50 per cent of the sheep and all the swine killed in packing houses are swung up by the feet, throats cut and left to bleed to death without first being stunned, or knocked unconscious."

R. W. Orcutt of the Sioux City, Ia. Lions' club, gave a short discussion on the possible sisterhood of the Sioux City organization and the local club.

District captains reported donations of $500 for the Salvation Army drive, with more assured.

The first Lions' club dance will be held in the ball room of the Rome hotel tonight at 8:30.

A Study in Comparisons

Timely Illustrations of the Many Big Opportunities Regularly and Consistently Offered at Brandeis Stores

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating"—is a homely saying and as old as the hills. But it is readily understood. The proof of the bargain is the quality and price of the goods. You will readily understand that, too.

The ability to give real and continuous saving in the way of prices depends upon the ability to take advantage of bargains offered by manufacturers or jobbers who are in need of immediate cash. This is particularly true in times when money is as "tight" as it is now and has been for many months.

In this particular Brandeis is well fortified to serve its army of customers. We Can Pay the Cash Whenever Cash Means Material Reductions in Prices. For that reason we can, in our 39th Anniversary Sale, as well as all other occasions, offer high quality goods at prices which cannot be discounted by any other store in America.
