

Russia's Pre-War Cotton Plants May Not Reopen

Industry Suffered to Such an Extent During Revolution That Rejuvenation Is Doubtful.

London, Oct. 27.—Russia's great pre-war cotton industry has suffered to such an extent during the revolution that it is doubtful whether many of the mills ever will be able to operate again, says Sir Charles Macara, an English authority in the world's cotton trade, in an interview in the Yorkshire Post.

Based upon information obtained from an Englishman who recently returned from Russia, where for 14 years he was the manager of a large cotton factory near Moscow, Sir Charles estimates that of the 9,000,000 spindles running in Russia before the revolution not more than 300,000 or 300,000 are now operating.

Industry Nationalized.

The experiences of the English manager of the Moscow factory were told as an example of the methods employed by revolutionists in dealing with Russia's great industrial assets, the textile factories in the Moscow district. This particular mill carried on all the processes from cotton spinning to the finished product. 17,000 workers having been employed under normal operating conditions.

When the bolsheviks assumed power the whole cotton industry was nationalized. At every mill committees were formed and finally, in October, 1919, a decree was issued that all who had been connected with the former owners would have to leave. With the experts gone, the mill stopped. After a time attempts were made to restart it, but it was almost impossible to obtain raw cotton. Small quantities were obtained which after being diluted with 75 per cent waste, was put through the processes.

Machinery is Abused.

The machinery now is in a very bad state, in such a state, in fact, that it would be almost impossible to operate the factory properly, according to the information given Sir Charles. Whenever machines are damaged other machines are denuded of parts to repair them.

Sir Charles stated that there was little possibility of English workmen going to Russia for employment in textile factories. Mills in Germany and Austria were turning out only from 25 to 30 per cent of the normal production, he said, and English workers faced the almost impossible task of making up for the four and a half years' stoppage of textile manufacture owing to the war.

Lutherans Condemn War Rules on Missionaries

Washington, Oct. 27.—The biennial convention of the United Lutheran church finally adopted resolutions urging revocation of war-time restrictions on missionaries. The action presumably was aimed at the British government, which was frequently named in the debate.

Objection by members that it was not wise at this time to pass the statement of principles to which the resolutions were attached were voiced during the debate.

Full voting rights for members of church boards will be asked by the women's missionary society, by Mrs. J. G. Traver of New York, president, tomorrow.

Cox Justified Opposition to League, Says Orator

The campaign is over, because when Governor Cox, at Huntington, W. Va., said that he would sit down with the senate and reach an agreement before our going into the league of nations, he justified the opposition that has been spoken against the Wilson league," declared Dana Van Dusen, speaking Tuesday night at Fifteenth and Dodge streets under the auspices of the Douglas County Republican club. A large crowd cheered him lustily.

British Union Chief Hopeful of Settlement Soon

Feeling of Optimism Concerning English Coal Miners' Strike Expressed in All Quarters.

By JOHN STEELE.
New York Times—Charles Webb, Copyright, 1920.

London, Oct. 27.—"I am hopeful that the end is near," said Fred Winstone, South Wales miners' leader, on leaving a conference at which the miners' leaders and representatives of the coal mine owners met with the government.

This epitomizes the feeling of optimism concerning the labor situation which is found in all quarters today. The government officials are still more definite saying they expect the crisis will be dissolved within 24 hours.

The first move toward peace this morning was a two-hour meeting of the miners' executives in their headquarters, after which the full executive committee went to Downing street.

Shortly after their arrival it was announced that the conference no longer was an "unofficial conversation," but that official negotiations had been resumed.

Both sides were pledged to secrecy, but it is known that definite proposals towards settlement of the strike were put forward by Lord George which the miners' executive committee was disposed to think acceptable.

If, after discussion, they confirm this opinion, a full delegate meeting will be called tomorrow in London. This body has the power to call off the strike if it agrees to the proposals. If it disagrees, however, it is unlikely it will take the responsibility of rejecting the plan without a further ballot of the whole membership of the miners' federation.

According to reliable authority abroad an outline of the proposed settlement embraces the following points:

The miners will get two shillings per shift wage increase immediately. Wages will be fixed in future on a basis of the profits, coal owners' committees being established for the purpose of determining these profits and speeding up the output, which is the country's greatest necessity. There will be pit committees, both district and national.

The owners agree to do their best to improve facilities including provision of new machinery, more trucks, and better mine arrangements, while the miners promise to try with all their power to end absenteeism which now is one of the greatest factors of the low output.

A board will be set up which will review the whole coal position on December 31, and wages will rise or fall according to the recommendations of this board, based upon the financial condition of the mines.

Partial Eclipse of Moon Is Seen From Omaha

Following a cold, still, clear night in which the moonlight was unusually strong, a partial eclipse of the moon was visible from Omaha between 6:28 and 6:40 yesterday morning.

Rays of the rising sun, disseminating from a clear sky, soon rendered the eclipse invisible as the moon set. The eclipse, announced several days ago by Professor Rigge of the Creighton university observatory, affected an upper section of the luminary to about one-sixth. The moon looked as if a dirty finger had been laid across the upper left section. According to Professor Rigge, the eclipse was total as seen from points farther west than Omaha.

Revolt Stamped Out.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 27.—A brief but unsuccessful revolution broke out in Bolivia, according to advices received here today. The movement was immediately suppressed and 27 of its ringleaders were executed. A censorship has been imposed by the Bolivian authorities.

More than 65 per cent of the textile workers in Russia are women.
