Restoration of Old Time Prices
Worth of New Merchandise

Very Happy This Week

We have for months been seeking to make your dollar go further, for we knew actual distress was resulting from the high prices. You are not more glad than we are that the time has come when lower price levels are here.

In our immense new stocks you will find only reliable merchandise; and behind it are skilled hands and eager hearts full of the spirit of real service.

Today we make new offerings from OUR NEW MILLION DOLLAR STOCK—Prices that are not "special," but only those to which you are entitled because of the break in the market.

We ask you to remember that we are NOT HOLDING A SALE OF ANY KIND, but merely giving you new values made possible by the present conditions, which we hope continue from this time on.

New Story Told Of Crown Prince Rudolph's Death

Member of Hapsburg Family Lifts Veil From Mysterious Austrian Double Tragedy.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Oct. 27.—The "mystery of Mayerling," as the mysterious death of Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, around which there have been built many legends, has been spoken of for years, was lifted by a member of the Hapsburgs for the first time today.

Archduke Leopold Ferdinand, in an article in the Vossische Zeitung tells what he declares is the true version of Rudolph's death. Ferdinand in 1902 renounced his rank and gave up all claim to the throne, taking the name of Leopold Woelfling and marrying the girl of his choice.

The archduke says that the real story of the death of Crown Prince Rudolph was told to him by his father who was the most intimate friend of the old Emperor Franz Joseph and the crown prince. Ferdinand himself was also a close friend of Rudolph, knowing him intimately for a number of years.

In his story in the Vossische Zeitung he describes the unhappy marriage of Rudolph to Princess Stefania, of Belgium, the match having been arranged by the respective royal houses without consulting the young couple. He tells of her violent jealousies and how the stormy home life of the royal couple finally threw Prince Rudolph into the arms of the beautiful Baroness Vetsera.

Made Reservations.

After some difficulty Emperor Franz Joseph finally secured the word of honor of Crown Prince Rudolph that he would break with the baroness.

"But," says Ferdinand, "Rudolph gave his word with the mental reservation that he would see his love once more and drain to its dregs the painfully sweet cup of farewell."

"On that last evening there were numerous guests at the hunting lodge at Mayerling, including Hector Baltazzi, famous racing man and his brother, Aristide, both Greeks. Hector was generally reported to be the fiance of the pretty baroness of whom the crown prince was enamored."

Killed in Argument.

"During a party of the evening the gentlemen were all in one of the small parlors of the lodge. The baroness was elsewhere at the time and there was the customary heavy drinking by the men. Rudolph could never stand much drink and after a few glasses often became very violent.

"A discussion which arose became very heated and Rudolph soon collided with the hot blooded temperament of the two Greeks.

"It will probably never be known just how the trouble started, but soon there were threats of the use of daggers and swords and as these threats were made everybody jumped to their feet.

"At this moment, without any warning, a full champagne bottle

Women to Urge Laws to Check Divorce Evil

Mrs. Draper Smith and Dr. Jennie Callfas Tell Rotarians Women's Plans for Use of Ballot.

What the women are going to do with the ballot now that they have it was told members of the Rotary club at the noon-day luncheon in the Hotel Rome yesterday by Mrs. Draper Smith and Dr. Jennie Callfas.

Both speakers are officers in the National Women Voters' league, a nonpartisan organization.

The league is divided into eight departments, Mrs. Smith being in charge of the educational and child welfare, and Dr. Callfas in charge of social hygiene.

The educational measures which will be urged by Mrs. Draper Smith will be in the form of bills requiring school year in rural districts as well as in towns and cities. Equalization of school taxes will be a result of this change, Mrs. Smith declared.

Divorce preventatives will be advanced in the form of bills requiring minors, who have the consent of their parents to marry, to obtain their license 10 days before their wedding day.

Starting to speak on the subject of social hygiene, Dr. Callfas declared that any man or woman who has the right to vote and does not do so November 2 is not a good citizen.

In asking for social hygiene legislation of the next legislature Dr. Callfas will urge the adoption of a bill to expedite prosecution of assailants of minor girls.

When maximum sentence of 20 years in such cases is given, she says, women will see that the sentence is served.

Baroness Was Shot.

"A few moments later the Baroness Vetsera entered the doorway, where she was seen to stand as if petrified at the figure of her lover stretched on the floor. Suddenly there was a shot and the Baroness Vetsera fell dead not far from the spot where Rudolph had fallen.

"The body of the crown prince was taken to the palace in Vienna, with the glass splinters from the champagne bottle still sticking in the wounds in his smashed skull.

"For reasons of state the government announced that Rudolph had committed suicide rather than admit the truth, which it was feared would have a serious effect on political conditions at the time."

Archduke Ferdinand says that all witnesses to the murder of the crown prince took a solemn oath to preserve silence, but that a full report was made to the emperor.
