

Millers' Chief Attacks Wilson Administration
Milling Industry Nearly Killed by Democrats' Work

Farmers Also Hard Hit as Liverpool Fixes Prices of Wheat So That They Are in Hands of British.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—There are two great markets for the American farmer's wheat, the American flour mills and the export business which centers in Liverpool. By action of the Wilson administration, the American flour mills have been put out of business, as far as the export of flour is concerned. That leaves the Liverpool wheat market the great power in handling wheat and fixing wheat prices, and the wheat in Liverpool is in the hands of a British government commission. In other words, the Wilson administration has left the American farmer at the mercy of the British government.

The situation was explained today, as follows, by A. P. Husband, secretary of the millers' national federation in Chicago. By action of the American flour mills have been put out of business, as far as the export of flour is concerned. That leaves the Liverpool wheat market the great power in handling wheat and fixing wheat prices, and the wheat in Liverpool is in the hands of a British government commission. In other words, the Wilson administration has left the American farmer at the mercy of the British government.

The price of wheat in the United States is in reality fixed in Liverpool, and to Liverpool goes American wheat at a price fixed by the British. Consequently American farmers have lost approximately 90 cents a bushel on their wheat during the last few weeks, owing to the decline in the price, moreover, approximately 1,000,000 tons of mill feed is lost to American dairymen because of the exportation of wheat instead of flour, making it possible for European dairymen to make their products at a cost below that of American producers, as evidenced by the recent arrival in this country of butter from Denmark at a price below the American market.

For many years before the war the exportation of flour was about equal to that of wheat. As far back as 1880 40 per cent of the total export of wheat was in the form of flour. The percentage varied, according to the world crop conditions in different years.

During the war ocean rates were controlled by governmental agencies and the demand for flour was so great that the rates were not a serious consideration. As long as the United States grain corporation operated exportation of flour continued, but as it went out of existence the shipping board permitted the United States merchant marine to carry millions of bushels of wheat to Europe and on June 14 of this year decided the rate for flour at 25 cents per 100 above that for wheat was "justified." This means a discrimination in ocean rates of 50 cents per barrel against flour.

This discrimination in ocean rates against flour practically kills the export flour business, except in limited quantities. The exportation of flour in 1919 totalled 26,000,000 barrels. Now it amounts to practically nothing and the United States shipping board is now recommending the British royal commission is permitting British millers to buy wheat in this country at practically the price fixed by Great Britain and to take away from the United States the flour markets of Europe.

The exportation of wheat from the single port of New Orleans in July, August and September of this year totalled more than the whole annual exportation from that port in normal years. Yet, with all this wheat going across the seas from New Orleans, only eight barrels of flour were in the cargoes in September.

Battle for Votes In Ohio Bitter

Campaign in Home State of Harding and Cox Waxing Hotter as End Approaches.

Columbus, O., Oct. 28.—The bitter fighting of the 1920 battle for the presidency now is being waged in Ohio, the home of both the republican and democratic nominees. The "favorite son" phase of the contest has injected into the situation a personal touch—the natural desire of each candidate to attain the honor of carrying his own state—and has spurred their partisans to a struggle the like of which Ohio never before has seen.

The old motto "anything is fair in love or war or politics," appears to have been adopted as a slogan by the workers on both sides. No opportunity to bring personalities and scandals into the campaign has been overlooked and this aspect of warfare has charged the atmosphere with tense feeling.

Senator Harding and Governor Cox themselves have refrained from personal mud-slinging at each other, it should be said, and it is not known that campaign managers have had any contention with this aspect of the controversy. By the usual "grapevine" channel of dissemination, however, a veritable flow of back-alley gossip has been turned loose.

Much of this slush is of the variety that should never get into the press unless a publisher is prepared to stand a heavy libel suit. Anonymous letters and circulars are being widely spread, it is reported.

Church Rendezvous For Night Riders

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 28.—A small country church on the Cullman-Blount county line was the rendezvous of the alleged night riders who posted signs and stores with warnings to close down until cotton was quoted at 40 cents a pound, according to officers, who returned here after assisting in the arrest of 43 men. All of the suspects lived within a radius of five miles of Arab, a small community in Blount county, and were comparatively young men, the officers said.

The arrests followed investigations by State Fire Marshal W. J. Williams and Conrad Austin, chief of the law enforcement squad. The latter said he had evidence enough to convict all of those arrested, who will be charged with conspiring to commit a felony and uttering threats verbally and in writing.

Embarrassment Caused by Talk Of Jap Minister

Confidential Interchanges Between Japan and U. S. Over Land Trouble In California Divulged In Speech.

Tokio, Oct. 28.—(By The Associated Press.)—Some embarrassment has been caused the foreign office by the publication of addresses by Masano Hanihara, vice foreign minister, before various political groups of the Diet on developments in the negotiations with the United States relative to the California land question. There has been a tacit agreement between Washington and Tokio that the government would not make public statements regarding the negotiations, which are continuing sympathetically.

It is understood that talks given by M. Hanihara to political leaders have been a sort of concession to politicians who have been demanding less secrecy in diplomatic matters. They have been of a confidential nature, but, nevertheless, full reports have been published by newspapers here. In this connection the vice foreign minister has made a request that a statement be published that newspaper reports of his address before the Kenyuki party in the House of Peers on October 16 were distorted versions of his remarks, and attributed to him statements he did not make.

M. Hanihara, speaking on October 16, was reported to have declared that measures taken to check the anti-Japanese movement in California had been futile. He was said to have declared that if the referendum measure should be adopted by the California voters there would be an appeal to the supreme court by Japanese residents of that state, a demand for the nullification of the law as an infringement on the Japanese-American treaty and negotiations for a new convention between Japan and the United States.
