

Americanism to Win Next Tuesday Hays Declares

No Failure Under Leadership Of Harding and Coolidge, Republican National Chairman Says.

BY WILL H. HAYS, Republican National Chairman.
New York, Oct. 28.—Drop Sunday and there are three more working days of this campaign. So far as the republicans of the country are concerned, the three days will be as full of enthusiasm as of work. The spur of the endeavor ever is present. Our candidates are men who inspire effort in their behalf, not only because they are the kind of men that they are, but because of the high Americanism which they represent.

Under certain leaders these can be no failure, and there is no failure this year. The leadership of Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge appeals to men and women voters of the United States not only to the republicans, but to thousands of others whose creed, like that of the republicans, is Americanism.

From the very beginning of the present administration in Washington there have been few things done in the spirit of real Americanism. There have been shiftness, evasion and dodging of issues, and there have been high sounding words and elegant diction in plenty, but beyond this, little or nothing to appeal to the imagination or to the hearts of the red blooded Americans who have world-wide sympathies and the willingness to help all peoples in distress, but who feel that their first duty is to their own country and to their own countrymen.

Extravagance, wastefulness and a disregard for the principles of economics have marked every step of the way of the democratic administration of the nation's affairs. The people are determined to put a stop to something which is worse than prodigality. The only way to put a stop to it is to put in authority those who will put a stop to it.

No republican who has, so to speak, taken thought of the morrow, has any doubt as to the outcome on next Tuesday. A stalwart Americanism always has won and stalwart Americanism is to win again.

Farmers' Union Head Says Corn Burning No New Procedure

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 28.—Burning corn as a substitute for coal is not a new procedure for Nebraska farmers, according to C. H. Gustafson, president of the Nebraska Farmers' union. Reports reaching Mr. Gustafson from many parts of the state indicate that the farmers are seriously considering the using of corn this year as a substitute for the high priced coal.

"Many farmers have been forced to sell unshelled corn at 48 cents a bushel," Mr. Gustafson said. "Assuming that new corn weighs 70 pounds to the bushel, it is readily understood why it is cheaper to burn grain as fuel in preference to coal that costs at least $17 a ton," he said. In the early history of the state it was a common practice among the farmers to burn corn as fuel. Mr. Gustafson said. In recent years, however, the price of corn has not justified the farmers in such a practice. Mr. Gustafson is of the opinion that farmers of the state have not used corn as fuel since 1906—when the corn crop was even larger than this year's estimated yield of 251,619,000 bushels.
