

Will Appear Here In Concert Shortly

Zanco di Primo, dramatic tenor, and his talented Russian wife, pianist, write to friends in Omaha that they expect to appear here in concert in the very near future. They have been touring the Pacific coast states, where warm appreciation has been given. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer of October 26 says of them:

"Seattle patrons of music who thronged the Metropolitan theater to hear Sergio Zanco, Italian dramatic tenor, and his Russian wife, Mme. Eugenie di Primo, pianist, in concert, witnessed last evening something in the way of a triumph. Both musicians, who appeared under the auspices of the Italian Commercial club, gave evidence of accomplishment in their particular field of endeavor that brought them back upon the stage time and time again to acknowledge the plaudits of an enthusiastic audience."

"What her husband does vocally Mme. di Primo accomplishes instrumentally. Under her fingers the keyboard becomes like the genius of the vase, pliant to the will of a master. There is no striving after effect, the technique of the pianist is too perfect for that, but there is the poise which

What's What

By HELEN DECIE

Walking is the most healthful of all exercises, and our glorious Indian summer weather is ideal for "hiking" parties. But the walkers ought to be suitably attired; especially should they be sturdily shod. The young woman delineated is obliged to cut short a pleasant autumnal ramble because with her correct tailored costume she is wearing shoes neither correct nor comfortable—slippers with French heels designed for ballroom wear, but worse than useless for a pedestrian.

Not all women can wear flat heels, it is true, for the high-arched foot requires a shoe to correspond. A sensible compromise in that case is the Cuban or military heel, which, though fairly high, is straight, and properly placed beneath the natural heel of the foot.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Why Betty Kane Sent for Madge.

I went around in what my little mother would have termed a "daze" for the rest of the day, following my astonishing interview with Dicky concerning my experience with Rita Brown. I had been shown an entirely new phase of my husband's character, and I was not quite certain whether or not I liked it.

Dicky's rages I had seen frequently, so often, in fact, that they had ceased to make me suffer much, had become annoying or amusing, as circumstances might direct. His volatile moods, his utterly irresponsible boyish tricks, had long since become an ordinary routine.

I had wondered sometimes if he would ever grow up, and here, overnight, as it were, I found a mentor, a judge, in the place of the irresponsible boyish husband I had known. My Peter Pan! Had he grown up at last? Would I never again feel the mixture of annoyance and thrilled admiration which his pranks gave me? With a humorous little recollection of the nonsense he had mixed with his grave lecture, I realized that Dicky's chief charm would stay with him always.

But I think it was given me in that moment to know that his volatile boyishness would be his only as an adjunct to his character, not as an integral part of it, as it had seemed to me to be. There came to me, too, a realization that I must readjust myself to this new state of affairs, and with the realization came the knowledge of a strange, new feeling for my husband dawning within my consciousness.

A Strange Summons.

I had loved Dicky wildly, passionately, have intensely admired his talents, have been extremely angry at him, foolishly jealous of him, but looking back over my married life, I do not know—I am ashamed to admit it even to myself—that I ever have really respected his judgment and common sense as a wife ought to be able to do.

I wondered in these hours of readjustment if the fault had been one of perception on my part or of real lack in Dicky. Had he suddenly grown to man's mental stature, or had my eyes been selfishly, foolishly blinded all these years?

I had plenty of leisure for my introspection and retrospection, for Dicky disappeared shortly after he had taken me back to the house, and remained away for the rest of the day. Mother Graham declared indignantly that she knew he was still looking up real estate agents, and her speculations as to his probable reasons for so doing were the only disturbing currents in the even flow of my day until the late afternoon, when a small boy appeared at the door with a note addressed to me in a prim, angular chirography.

"Whoever in the world can be writing to you?" my mother-in-law inquired curiously, and I felt her eyes upon me, as with a muttered word of apology I tore the note open.

Betty Kane's Mystery.

"It is from Betty Kane," I said, as I glanced at the signature, and then began to read the short note.

"Betty Kane! She's the crippled girl who runs the tea room, isn't she?" Mother Graham queried next, and I nodded an assent without speaking, for I was absorbed in the message which Betty Kane had written.

"Dear Mrs. Graham," it began. "Will you please, if possible, run in to see me today some time between 5 and 6? There is something here which I think you ought to see. Very cordially yours—Betty Kane." "Why don't you read it aloud?" my mother-in-law queried impatiently.

ly, and I did so, though with a queer little feeling of reluctance, as though the message were something which concerned me alone.

"She's probably got something there she wants to sell you," Mother Graham commented tartly when I had finished. "They always see you coming, Margaret, in every town you land. I suppose, however, it won't do any harm to go over and see what she wants. It must be terrible to have that affliction."

I smiled tenderly at the quickness of my mother-in-law. I knew that she would be as eager as I to aid Betty Kane in any way, but she must have her caution comment first.

I dressed hastily—for the hour the crippled woman had named was near at hand—and walked swiftly to the little tea room. I found it filled with guests, sitting tea and munching the little cakes for which Betty Kane's hands were famous.

She wheeled her chair to meet me as soon as she could leave her other guests, and I saw with surprise that her usually placid face was lined with worry.

"Please make an excuse to stay until the rest are gone," she whispered. "I must see you alone."

Hardy Ferns

The hardy fern with glossy leaves is a much better plant for the table than the delicate fernlike ferns. It becomes a "life struggle" for any variety of fern in the dry and heated atmosphere of a house, and so one should select only the hardiest for table decoration.

It is well to be sure that there are enough holes in the receptacle in which the fern is planted to afford good drainage.

Ferns thrive best in a moist atmosphere, and this congenial atmosphere can, with very little trouble, be provided for even the table fern. Have a case made of four pieces of window glass set in a wooden frame, sufficiently large to cover one or more ferns without brushing their sensitive fronds.

After sprinkling the leaves (do not pour water on the soil in this instance) plentifully with water place the case, which has no bottom, over the fern and allow it to remain thus over night. In the morning take the fern out and place near an open window for a few minutes, so that it may "breathe" the fresh air. A small glass showcase, a large glass bowl or an aquarium would, of course, serve the same purpose.

Scientific Meals

A practical guide in planning meals is to allow daily about three and one-half ounces of protein for a young or middle-aged man, of average size and doing a moderate amount of muscular work. It is advisable to obtain this protein from a variety of food such as meat, fish, eggs, wheat and dairy products.

Dye Materials

Where there are many children in a family it is economy to do considerable dyeing. Many a faded material can be made to appear in a fresh color. Light evening frocks can be dyed a darker shade and serve for school or afternoon wear. Remember to dye at the same time any extra piece of material to serve for altering or patching, as it is almost impossible to match a dyed material.

Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt Harwood entertained at dinner Tuesday evening complimentary to Judge R. W. Patrick. Others present were Judge and Mrs. A. M. Post and Charles Payne of Chicago.

Rupture Kills 7,000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore, cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—insensitive to the cause. What are you waiting for? No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., Block 210, St. Louis. We will send you a FREE trial Plapao and the information necessary.

Washing Devices

Some helpful washing devices are on the market. One is a perforated tunnel, made to place in a wash boiler, which works on the same principle as a coffee percolator, spraying the clothes and increasing the circulation of the water. The tunnel-on-a-stick washer creates a partial vacuum and makes it possible to wash more clothes at a time and also to wash very soiled clothing without immersing the hands or scrubbing.

The more than 1,700 women police reserves in New York will be retained under the police reorganization law.

Double Sinks

The double sinks, with one basin for washing and another for draining dishes, are very convenient. A small sink with a rubber stopper for its escape pipe may be used as a dish pan.
