

Offices in County Carried By Republicans

Compton Defeated for County Commissioner While Goss Loses in Race for District Judgeship.

The decisive republican victory in Douglas county, which carried the entire ticket with some majorities approximating 10,000, was a notable event in the annals of local politics.

The majorities and pluralities are so pronounced that not a republican candidate is in doubt, and in a few instances they polled majorities which were more than Harding's lead over Cox in this county.

There was county-wide interest in the contest between T. F. Stroud and A. D. Compton for the county commissionership in the Third district. Mr. Compton held the advantage, or disadvantage, of being the incumbent seeking re-election, while Mr. Stroud was a novice in politics, backed, however, by a determined circle of friends.

The contest among 12 candidates for seven judgeships of the district court was attended by a situation which involved the similarity of names and resulted in a safe place for the candidate whose name is L. B. Day. Judge Willis G. Sears not only led his division of the judicial ticket, but his unofficial total vote of 26,382 is the highest of any candidate on the Douglas county ballots.

An analysis of the republican and democratic vote offers a criterion of what was in the minds of the voters on Tuesday. David H. Bowman whose vote of 21,758 was the lowest of the republican candidates for the house of the state legislature, will run 5,000 ahead of Jerry Howard, who was high on the democratic legislative ticket, with a total of 17,358 unofficial returns. Owing to Mr. Howard's former showings, some of the republicans during the campaign admitted the possibility of the candidate beating the lowest republican candidate for the legislature, but even Jerry Howard went down to defeat and was covered over by the terrible "drift" of Tuesday.

Of the republican candidates for state senators, Charles L. Saunders held his old place of leading his ticket, with a present unofficial total of 26,534 and being the third highest of all the republican candidates. This was the seventh election of Mr. Saunders to the state senate. John W. Robbins, lowest of the republican candidates for state senator, received 23,976, which was thousands more than the highest democratic candidate for the senate. The closest with which the republican candidates for state representatives ran is shown by Vincent Hascall's high vote of 23,896 and the low vote of 21,958 for Bowman.

The range of votes in the democratic legislative ticket ranged from 17,358 for Howard to 8,240 for Hester Bronson Copper, the only woman on either legislative ticket. It is also noted that none of the democratic legislative indorsements of the "organized farmers and workers" in Douglas county, was elected.

A spirited campaign among four candidates for two police judgeships resulted in victory for Henry W. Dunn and Charles E. Foster, the former having served as chief of police and Mr. Foster having been elected several times and is now serving on the police court bench. Mr. Dunn comes in with 23,300 and Judge Foster received 21,276. It was 4,000 more than the vote received by Frank Dineen. A vigorous campaign was made by persons who were apparently interested in the election of Dunn and Dineen.

Another Term for Smith. Robert Smith, who has served 12 years as clerk of district court, was re-elected for another term of four years, his apparent lead over Peter Elgasser being 9,000.

Harry G. Counsman, present deputy county assessor, on the face of unofficial returns, defeated William F. Weber by a majority of nearly 12,000, one of the most decisive victories of the local campaign. Mr. Counsman is a native son of Omaha.

Judges Are Re-elected. John N. Baldwin, public defender-elect, holds a wide lead over William P. Lynch. George Holmes, Robert Patrick and Arthur C. Baldwin were re-elected judges of the municipal court, with C. W. Britt, former judge in this court, a runner-up.

Complete returns on candidates for the Board of Education indicate the re-election of D. A. Johnson, C. V. Warnick, J. H. Wallace and W. E. Reed, and the election of H. G. Straight and Louis Nelson to fill vacant terms. Albert N. Eaton, R. A. Van Orsdell and Max I. Walker were elected to fill the unexpired terms. Edward Hualwidt and A. A. Harnandez of the present board failed of re-election, according to figures available.

Jeffers Leads Harding. Judge George A. Day ran nearly four to one here in his race against William Dorsey for judge of the supreme court. The judge's total unofficial vote of 26,915 was next to the highest vote polled in Douglas county. Congressman Jeffers ran ahead of Harding in this county, where he led over O'Hara is more than 10,000, the latest figures being 25,016 for Jeffers.

is 17,333, as against 15,321 for Morehead. The governor ran far behind the republican ticket in this county and his vote is comparable with that received by Jerry Howard.

Clarence A. Davis, attorney general, received a strong indorsement for re-election, with a total of 22,093, and his opponent, Richard Hunter, of Omaha, trailing with 14,739.

The Harding and Cox vote in this county, with 13 precincts not heard from, is 25,055 to 16,545. The election estimates on Harding's lead in Douglas ranged from 8,000 to 10,000, and it is now believed that the official lead will be nearly 9,000.

The referendum proposition, proposing to remove the nomination of state officers except governor from the open primary was defeated in this county by an expression of nearly three to one.

Sears Leads Ticket. C. M. Wilhelm and J. C. Dahlman are the new members of the Metropolitan Water board, their nominations last spring being equivalent to election.

Judge Sears, who received the highest vote of all of the candidates in this county, stated that his campaign expenses were limited to the filing fee of $10 and the purchase of two cigars, the cost of which he would not divulge.

The following are complete returns from Douglas county with the exception of eight Omaha precincts and five country precincts:

Balloon School To Be Removed To Scott Field

Future of Post Here Will Be Determined Later—Order of Transfer to Be Signed in Near Future.

By E. C. SNYDER. Washington Correspondent Omaha Bee, Washington, Nov. 3.—(Special Telegram.)—Fort Omaha is to be abandoned as a balloon school and troops and the entire equipment, including the hydrogen gas plant, will be removed to Scott Field, near Belleville, Ill., according to information given out from responsible military sources.

The decision to abandon the post has been reached by the general staff although it may be a month before the orders for the transfer of troops and equipment are issued.

No Reason Given. The reason for the abandonment of the Fort Omaha school featured and learned. The only explanation given in military circles is that the policy of the general staff calls for centralization of activities in conformity with the recently enacted law reorganizing the army.

The future of the post is problematical, although there is considerable talk of retaining it as a supply depot. The amount of money the War department has for such expenditures will probably decide what use will be made of the fort.
