HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Decision Made. "So—you—dared." Hugh Grantland's tone was icy as he towered above the man whom I knew only as "Tim."

He had given me only the briefest of nods when he had appeared so abruptly in the doorway of Betty Kane's kitchen, and there crept over me the snubbed-little-girl feeling which I often experience when the officer is intent upon some business. Maj. Grantland has more than most men what Dicky terms a "single track mind," and I saw that in this instance the track was a particularly narrow gauge one.

Tim threw me a beseeching glance. "It wasn't no harm, major," he said, shrinking from the tall officer, whose long, sinewy hand was outstretched toward his coat collar. "The lady'll tell you it wasn't no harm."

"That makes no difference," the hand tightened on the coat collar now. "You had your orders from me. You have chosen to violate them. Now you will take the consequences. Come along."

For a panic-stricken second or two I thought Maj. Grantland meant to inflict physical punishment upon the man before my eyes. Then I saw that he was simply impelling him toward the door, and I guessed that the destination of the luckless taxi driver was the nearest jail. I had surmised before that the secret of Hugh Grantland's hold over the man was the knowledge he probably possessed of Tim's peccadilloes. Curiously enough, in the actual consummation of the thing he had feared, Tim appeared to lose the terror of Hugh Grantland which he had exhibited all through his interview with me.

"I guess I'm the goat, all right, all right," he said, with rough bravado. "You tell me if I come near the lady you'll put me in stir, and the dame, she hands me the same spiel if I don't deliver her letter for the matter."

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost, you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, and look years younger.

Omaha Women Who Have Met Anna Case Like Her Simplicity. A number of Omaha women are looking forward to the coming of Anna Case, soprano, Thursday evening at the Brantley in a concert under the auspices of the Tuesday Musical club. Mrs. Alvis A. Johnson heard Miss Case in concert at Tequa, O., four years ago and was impressed with her beauty and charm, her simplicity and her personality to that of Schuman-Heink.

Mrs. Martin Harris heard Miss Case sing in opera, and also heard her at Lake Hopatong, N. J., before her professional debut. Miss Kathryn Ralston, when in Chicago two years ago, attended a concert given by this singer, and following the performance was presented to the very unaffected manner and graciousness of the soprano.

considered his duty was concerned, that he was perfectly capable of taking the letter from either my hand or hand bag if he should make up his mind it was to my interest for him to do so.

Madge Hesitates. But though I owed Hugh Grantland for my life, though I knew that I had no friend in all the world more single-minded, more devoted to my happiness than he, yet I had a sudden inexplicable reluctance to give him the letter pleading for pardon which Grace Draper had sent me.

What I meant to do with the letter, whether or not I should grant the plea of the girl who had wrought me so much evil, I had as yet no idea. But one thing I realized clearly: The matter of pardoning Grace Draper must lie between myself and one other person—and that other person was not Maj. Hugh Grantland.
