Gave to Government the Borglum Head of Lincoln

One of the housing investigators who were in Omaha Saturday, was Mr. Eugene Meyer, jr., of New York. Meyer is recalled here as the man who purchased the Gutzon Borglum head of Lincoln and presented it to the government. This fine bit of marble now stands in the rotunda of the capitol at Washington, where it is greatly admired because of the remarkable conception of the face of the great president the sculptor has memorialized in an imperishable manner.

Outlaws Defy Death to Bring Whisky Here

6,000 Quarts Brought Here From Canada Each Week by Desperate Bands in Ships, Cars and Airplanes.

MINOT, N. D., Nov. 13.—(Special)—More than 15,000 quarts of whisky are illegally imported from Canada each week, of which about 40 per cent is taken to Omaha, local officers estimated.

In this vicinity from eight to 10 cars are known to dash to the border and to return each night laden with from 18 to 25 cases of whisky each. The unusual activity and daring of these border whisky runners is attributed to the fact that the prairie provinces of Canada go dry on January 1 and probably of the supply of liquor being cut off before the roads are passable in the spring.

Numerous Night Battles. The result has been numerous night battles on lonely roads between United States prohibition rangers and whisky runners. The border has become a seething turmoil of intrigue.

Tales of plots in which desperate men plan to use ships, airplanes, armored cars, dynamite and even incendiary water wagons to transport liquor to this country, plots usually thwarted by federal officers, are so common that their veracity seems almost certain. Daily men are facing death to enforce the 18th amendment. Federal agents are forced to cope with phantom airplanes; they must suborn and advance on lonely log cabins filled with armed men and said to contain large stores of whisky, they must unearth stills which are electrically attached to dynamite charges.

Madison County Sheriff Fails to Locate Leper

Declares Diligent Search for Last Three Days Failed to Show Hiding Place of Diseased Man.

Noriook, Neb., Nov. 13.—(Special Telegram)—When Sheriff Clint Smith of Madison was told today that the state board of health has decided to make an inquiry into the mysterious disappearance last July of Charles Young, the Madison county leper, he declared that he was not interested. He said he had made a diligent search and was not able to find the leper.

The sheriff declared he did not know that the leper had escaped from the temporary pest house on the county poor farm near Battle Creek until he was asked about it by A. K. Donovan, a representative of The Omaha Daily Bee, who was in Madison Wednesday.

"When I learned that Young had disappeared from the pest house," the sheriff said, "I was not surprised, because when I last saw Young in June, he complained to me about the sanitary condition of his surroundings. On one side of his hut was a pig pen and on the other an outbuilding. No one was really guarding him. So far as I am concerned, I believe Young was cured of leprosy. He was taking a certain kind of oil and the spots which first caused his detention had entirely disappeared. I don't know where he is now, although I made a diligent search when I heard of his being away."

County Attorney Tyler declared he knew nothing of Young's disappearance. Newspaper stories of the leper's disappearance, he said, was the first he heard of the escape.
