The Story of Little "Bob White"

Do you know how the quail happens to call "Bob White?" The tradition has an important bearing on the efforts of the United States government to impress upon the general public the importance of feeding the birds during the winter months. It is related that in the long ago there was a little lad in kilts who was a lover of all beings and all things. This child's name was "Bob White." So full of love was he that the birds and beasts followed him and adopted him as their pal. Inspired by the love-thoughts of this little child, the father set aside a portion of his grain to be used as winter feed for the birds. And the little boy in kilts often wandered over the snow-covered plains scattering food for his feathered friends. One morning in spring little Bob White was missing. The birds did not need him then for they were able to find their own food. But birds and beasts, unlike some of their two-legged masters, never forget a friend. Their gratitude is as eternal as the stars. So the birds held a mass meeting to devise ways and means for finding their little friend. They sang songs at the window of his bed chamber and beat their wings against the window panes in the hope of awakening him. But their little benefactor did not answer. Finally they appointed the quails to search the world over for their friend. Through all the years the quails have been faithful to their trust. It is their whistle that translates itself into the human tongue and gives to every listening ear the plaintive call, "Bob White! Bob White! Bob White!" Interpreted this means: "Feed the winter birds." It will be an investment that will pay big dividends from the Bank of Practical Results, as well as from the Bank of Kindness.
