 January 4-5—Valparaiso at Valparaiso, Ind.
 January 6—Open.
 January 7—Northwestern at Evanston, Ill.
 January 11-12—Grinnell at Lincoln.
 January 21-22—South Dakota at Lincoln.
 January 24—Oklahoma at Lincoln.
 February 1-5—Open.
 February 6-8—Then at Ames.
 February 11-12—Grinnell at Grinnell.
 February 18-19—Notre Dame at Lincoln.
 February 25-26—Open.
 March 4-5—Ames at Lincoln.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 27.—(Special.)—A basket ball schedule including probably 25 games and covering a period of nearly three months, was announced today by Coach Paul Schissler of Nebraska university. The schedule is the biggest that any Nebraska team has ever tackled.

Games with Illinois, Northwestern, Grinnell, Ames, South Dakota, Oklahoma and Notre Dame are included in the schedule. The basket ball season will probably start December 10 with a practice game in Lincoln.

On December 17 and 18, Coach Schissler hopes to schedule semi-practice battles with some nearby colleges. On December 26, the Cornhusker squad of 12 members will leave for Urbana, Ill., where they will go into training with the Illinois university team for nearly a week.

To Play Illinois.
Nebraska and Illinois will mix in regular games on the Urbana floor, January 1 and 3. Then it is planned to take the team to Valparaiso, Ind., for games on January 4 and 5. Coach Schissler hopes to schedule a game with some other teams in Illinois for January 6 and then meet Northwestern at Evanston the following day.

Returning to Lincoln, the Nebraska quintet will play Grinnell, January 11 and 12. The following week-end, South Dakota will come here for two games on Friday and Saturday evenings. Oklahoma will journey to Nebraska for two games on January 21 and February 1.

February 4 and 5 dates are open and will probably be filled by conference schools. The following week, the Nebraska team will journey to Iowa for four games. The Cornhuskers will play at Ames on February 9 and 10 and at Grinnell on the two days following.

Notre Dame will make its annual trip west the following week, meeting the Nebraska team on the local floor, February 18 and 19. Nebraska had no trouble in trouncing the Catholic basket tossers last year.

Meet Ames at Lincoln.
February 25 and 26 are open at present. During tournament week, the Ames quintet will travel to Lincoln and do battle with the Cornhuskers basket-throwers on March 4 and 5.

With seven of last year's letter men back, four regulars and three substitutes, Coach Schissler should have little difficulty in building up a team that will rival the victorious Nebraska team of last year.

Bekins, the speedy center, should be as good as ever again this year. "Bek" won a reputation of his accurate tossing field goals and free throws and his regularity in getting tips. This is Bekins' second year of basket ball at the state university.

Capt. Russell Bailey is a speedy guard who will fill one of the positions near the opponents' goals very well. He will not have the assistance of his running mate, Schellenberg, who graduated last spring.

Smith and Patty, two former Omaha High school stars, are expected to feature at the forward positions. They will be backed up by Jungmeyer, a substitute center and forward last year. Pickett, who played forward part of the time last year, has filled his quota of years at the sport and cannot play this year.

Monte Munn at Guard.
Bob Russell, who showed considerable promise toward the end of last season in South America and will not be back to play until the second semester begins, February 1. Monte Munn, a substitute at center and guard, will play this year. The big foot ball guard is fast and should make a favorable showing. Dick Newman, also a foot ball man, will be put for a guard position. He was a substitute last year.

A number of last year's freshmen will try for places. Hartley, halfback on the foot ball team, is a fast man on the basket ball floor and plays well at almost any position. Munger, Carmen and Warren are all promising prospects.

Dobish, who played on the freshman team, has developed considerable speed and weight since last year and will get a chance to show his basket ball ability. Kohl and Balaun are prospects from last year's yearlings.

Coach Schissler lost several promising men when they followed Coach Tommy Mills to Beloit. Paynter, who played substitute on the team last year, Maxwell, Gardner and Clyde Smith, freshman players, went with the former Creighton coach.

European Cycling Stars Arrive in U. S. for Race.
New York, Nov. 27.—Eighteen European cycling stars, including Oscar Egg of Switzerland, Orlando Piani of Italy, Bob Spears and six Belgians, arrived here today. They are entered in the 29th international six-day race to be held the week beginning December 5.

1,740 Founders for Club.
International Sporting club of New York City has 1,740 founder members.

1920 State High School Champs

Ellingson, end; Williams tackle; L. Mousel, guard; Campbell, center; C. Mousel, guard; Thompson, tackle; Coder, end. Backfield, Rodwell, quarterback; Ballah, halfback; Rankin, fullback; C. Carrol, halfback (e). Substitutes—Fiddler, D. Carrol, P. Mousel, Cotton, Simon.

Walter Eckersall Selects All-Star Team

good advantage to shake off tacklers and was efficient with the stiff arm. On defense he sized up plays quickly and directed his team to the danger point.

State of Michigan is awarded the other half back position. While not as sensational as the Ohioan, the Wolverine proved a reliable ball carrier and the best punter in the conference. Although his punt in the Ohio game may have cost Michigan a chance of a tie, the fault rested with the rightside of the Wolverine line.

In addition to being reliable in advancing the ball on either end runs or off tackle smashes, Steteketee was a dependable field goal kicker. This ability was shown in the Minnesota contest, when he booted the oval between the posts for the only score of the game. He is heavy and fast and his work. His defensive qualifications match up with his offensive ability.

Ralph Fletcher of Illinois is one of the best field goal kickers in the country, but his other qualifications are not the equal of other backs. Glen Devine of Iowa, Grausnick of Northwestern, Elliott of Wisconsin, and Williams of Indiana were among the conference half backs of the first year.

Crangle of Illinois should be the unanimous choice of all critics for the fullback position. What this great player lacked in offensive ability he more than made up for in defensive play. He probably ranks with Tom Hammond of Michigan and Marc Catlin of Chicago in this department. The Illinois player, weighing more than 190 pounds, hit the line so hard that he frequently made ground when opposition was met. He also was a reliable man in the interferences, and was of great assistance in breaking up an opponent's forward pass attack.

Sundt of Wisconsin, was Crangle's nearest approach. Ekberg of Minnesota, who played a sterling game at end before he was shifted to fullback, was another great player. Nelson of Michigan, Willaman of Ohio, and Hanisch of Chicago were among other leading players in the position.

Slater Invaluable at Tackle.
Slater of Iowa is placed at right tackle because of his consistent play all year. While a marked man in every contest, the colored warrior seldom permitted gains through him on several occasions offensive teams delegating as many as two men to keep him out of the play. Being strong and powerful, he is the proper man for the position.

The other tackle position is awarded to McGuire of Chicago. It will be recalled that the Maroon forward wall from tackle to tackle fought the strongest in the conference, and McGuire was a principal factor in the line. He broke up many an opponent's play before they were formed. Also aided the backs on numberless occasions by opening holes.

Scott of Wisconsin, Goetz of Michigan, Huffman of Ohio, Tergberg of Minnesota, and Birk of Purdue played strong games at the position all season, as did Risley of Indiana.

Penfield for Guard Post.
Capt. Graham Penfield of Northwestern is awarded the left guard position. This player was one of the main reasons for the Purple's success this year. He played a strong defensive game, continually urging his teammates to greater efforts. He was seldom kept out of a play.

The other guard position is given to Tierney of Minnesota. Although this player was member of a weak team, few gains were made through him. He always commanded respect of opponents and a few generals elected to waste a down by sending a play at him.

Taylor of Ohio State played an aggressive game all season, but had the fault of leaving his position to soon. This fault should be rectified next year, when he should be among the leading forwards of the west. McCaughey of Indiana, Hartong of Chicago, and Brader of Wisconsin played a strong game all year.

Depler Best of Fine Centers.
Captain Depler of Illinois is given the pivot position, although closely pressed by Bunge of Wisconsin and Nemecek of Ohio State. The Illinois leader was an accurate passer, who always made sure to get the ball to the proper man before paying any attention to opponents. On defense he was equally strong. Vick of Michigan also rated well up with the centers.

This team as selected would be strong in every department. Forward passes could be used with excellent performers on both ends. The close and open attack could be employed for desired results. In Steteketee, the team would be well fortified in the kickback department.

Commerce Gridsters On All-Star Team

Speicher, Bloodgood proved reliable at all times and seldom failed to gain ground when called upon to carry the pigskin.

The fullback berth was awarded to Meyers of Beatrice. High for his ability at punting the line and off tackle duties. He can pick holes and knows what to do when he finds one. Yechout of Commerce gave the Beatrice gridster a close race for the first team and therefore was placed on the second team. The Commerce warrior played a steady game all season and was one of the best ground gainers for the Commercial team.

Tryba of Columbus was selected on the second team for his line plunging, open field running and kicking. In Tryba, Speicher and Yechout, the second squad has a backfield that would give the first string warriors plenty of trouble if the two aggregations ever collided. Speicher was chosen to do the punting for the second team, while Mahoney was picked as the booter for the first eleven.

Captain of Second Team.
Speicher is chosen captain of the second team. He uses good judgment in placing his kicks and several times this year he called signals when his team was in danger and successfully steered his teammates from the shadows of their goal line. One of his chief assets is his kicking ability. He kicked 31 consecutive goals without a miss.

Rodwell, the speedy Cambridge skipper, was almost the unanimous choice for the position at quarterback on the all-star first team. He was pressed for his berth by Cameron of Commerce. The Cambridge pilot is fast, handles his team well and flips the oval fast and with accuracy. Cameron is a direct on the second team and deserves the pilot's job. He is fast, and can pass fairly well.

Rokusek of Commerce and Ellingson of Cambridge were selected for the ends. These two wingmen are speedy in closing in on punts and are good tacklers. Carrol of Cambridge and Hansen of Commerce were the choice of the coaches and officials for the end positions on the second squad.

The tackle on the first squad were awarded to Hepperlin of Beatrice and Thompson of Cambridge because of their steady playing all season. The gridsters are good tacklers and know how to break up forward passes. Packard of Lincoln and Galloway of Omaha Central landed on the second team at tackle. The Lincoln warrior is a second line man and plays the defensive and offensive formations well as any high school player in the state. The latter, while a marked man in any game, is deserving of a place on the second aggregation because of his ability to break up plays and tackle.

Krasne Lands Berth.
Krasne of Commerce was the unanimous choice for guard on the first team. This berce Commercial warrior was one of the main factors in the Commerce line and his small attack easily won him a berth on the team. Tschudy of Columbus tips the beam at 170 pounds, a heady player and good at breaking up plays and tackling.

Kase of West Point and Ha of Commerce were picked on second team for guard position because of their hard playing all season and their ability to open holes in the opponent's front line. Hodgson was the choice of the coaches and officials for center on the team, although he was pushed for the berth by Freid of South who was placed on the second team. The former is a good defensive center and passes well. Freid was at best in the Commerce-South H. battle; however, the Packer played a hard game throughout the past season, passing accurately and plowing through the opposing side's center wall. A whole two teams would give any two squads of gridsters a hard battle. The first team is strong in every department and is composed of a speedy backfield, piloted by a heady quarterback, working behind a strong wall of defense. All the players on the first aggregation are good offensive players and the two ends are especially good at running down punts, and pulling forward passes out of the air.

349 Heats Below 2:10 In Grand Circuit Trots.
During the Grand circuit season, from Cleveland to Atlanta, a total of 312 heats were required to decide 181 trotting races. Of that number, 349 were below 2:10 and 33 in 2:05 or better. Of the 368 heats paced in 428 races, 349 were better than 2:18 and 142 below 2:05.

Strict Rulings Keep Wisconsin Boxing Straight

Unlucky the Fighter Who Attempts to Buck Commission In Badger State; Must Keep Sport Clean.

For a number of years boxing has been legal in Wisconsin, and, judging by conversation with one of the leaders of the sport there, it is going to remain legal unless unforeseen action is taken to knock the present law off the statute books. The reason it is going to remain legal is because those who control the sport have been successful in keeping it clean and they absolutely refuse to reduce in the slightest degree the strict methods which were adopted long ago.

It is the boxing commission which is deserving of all credit for what has happened in the Badger state. The commission has been responsible for the clean nature of the sport in the past, and the men who form the commission will continue to rule with a strict hand in order to keep boxing as it should be. At the head of this commission is Walter Liginger, a man who knows sport—and by sport we mean not alone boxing, but many other lines of athletic endeavor.

Liginger, as chairman of the Wisconsin boxing commission, is the man who has done much to gain the name of the "iron ruler" of boxing. He has been the head and shoulders of boxing ever since the game became lawful in the state, and his methods have at times brought him plenty of criticism.

It seems that "they" (we place quotation marks here because those to whom we refer consist of just two classes of men interested in the glove sport) do not believe in discipline, and do not think that boxing should be ruled with an iron hand to keep it clean.

The only trouble that Liginger and the men who form the commission have had to contend with has been made by boxers and their managers, according to Liginger. He says that this trouble never would have cropped up, if the glove wielders and their managers followed the laws as laid down by the state and the commission. When efforts were made to override the powers in control there was trouble.

That is the situation as it appears in Wisconsin today. When one considers the success boxing has attained in Milwaukee, where the big auditorium—probably the finest spot for the sport in the world—is located and in Kenosha, it is really remarkable that the sport goes along so well without encountering greater difficulties. It is not often that the "comish" gets mixed in a jam with fellows who take exception to the rulings by Chairman Liginger. But when there is a "jam" it is a lead pipe cunch that there is going to be a winner, and that winner will be the body which rules the sport.

"Mully" to Leave Central High

Dr. Harold R. Mulligan, head coach at Central High school, will resign his position at the end of this school year to take an active practice of medicine. Mulligan has been connected with the school since 1915, when he came here as coach from Lincoln High school.

Mulligan is a graduate of Beatrice High and Nebraska university. While at Nebraska he was one of Jumbo Steins' pupils, and played at an end position on the Nebraska grid team.

When Mulligan came to Central High, he not only coached all athletics, but also coached the debating team and the senior class play. In 1915 his debating team won the state title by defeating Lincoln High.

In 1916 and 1917 Mulligan produced the best of foot ball teams that ever represented Central High. The teams won the Missouri Valley championship both years. His teams were runner-up for the state title in these years. In 1916 Mulligan's track team journeyed to St. Joseph and "copped" the Missouri Valley title.

Mulligan started the 1920 foot ball season with a squad of raw recruits, and after a poor start whipped a team into shape that made a good ending, winning its last two games by large scores. The team showed signs of good coaching and a thorough knowledge of the game.

"Mully" will coach this year's basket ball and track teams. He hopes to make a good showing in the floor game. Mulligan's successor has not been named.

Amateur boxing will be one of the big features in local Y activities, in the event that the state legislature passes a boxing bill at the next session, according to N. J. Weston, physical director of the "Y."

There has been more interest displayed by the various local amateur boxers in the last month, than in any other previous year, said Weston yesterday. "The would-be fighters are flocking in thick and fast and if the boxing bill is passed, we intend to form several boxing clubs and arrange matches with the different state associations and those of other cities."

Robert Ferguson, boxing instructor at the "Y" is busy these days, since another class of 16 boxers has been formed. Both classes have an enrollment of 16.

Entries are still being received and a third class may be formed soon. Any one wishing to take up amateur boxing may inquire at the physical department at the "Y."

Additional news of interest to sport fans can be found on page 8-C of this section.

"Y" Grapplers to Meet Cornhuskers Here in Dual Event Jan. 12

COACH HAROLD R. MULLIGAN

According to present plans the dual wrestling meet between the local "Y" mat grapplers and the wrestlers of the University of Nebraska will be held at the local "Y" gymnasium on January 12, and at Lincoln the following week.

Physical Director N. J. Weston of the local "Y" announced yesterday that negotiations are underway with Dr. F. H. Luchring, director of athletics at the Nebraska Uni and everything looks favorable for one of the best meets in the history of the mat game at the "Y."

The dual meet between the local "Y" and Council Bluffs Y. M. C. A. will be held next month.

Omaha "Y" will have a larger number of mat wrestlers to pick from this year than ever, since the wrestling class of 20 has been organized and is training hard under the directions of Tom Ray, well-known professional wrestler.

Omaha Motorcycle Riders to Hold Show

The Omaha Motorcycle Club will stage an athletic program next Tuesday evening at the club rooms, Sixteenth and Clark streets. A number of good wrestling matches are on the program.

The meeting next Tuesday evening will be in the nature of a "get-together" meeting and the club is anxious to have all motorcycle riders attend. No admittance fee will be charged.

Local Soccer Teams In Final Game Today

The Caledonians and Townsends will meet in the final soccer game in the District league this afternoon at Miller park. The game is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock. The city title is at stake.

Lion Bonding Team Defeats Mutual Benefits

The Lion Bonding and Surety Co. basket ball team defeated the Mutual Benefit quintet last night at the Omaha Athletic club, 42 to 15. Chalcher played the best game for the Lion quintet, while Haley and Spittler starred for the Mutual squad.
