

Fight Is Started to Secure $7,000,000 Of German's Estate

San Francisco, Nov. 30.—Lucien H. Boggs, general counsel for the alien property custodian, was here today to discuss with federal investigating officers the legal matters concerning the $7,000,000 estate of Herman Sielcken, known as a "colored king" who died in Baden, Germany, several years ago. Mr. Boggs arrived last night. Sielcken's name recently was brought into testimony in the trial of Dr. Edward A. Rumley, and others, accused of concealing alleged German ownership of the New York Evening Mail during the war. Mrs. Clara Sielcken, the widow, is seeking to have her husband declared an American citizen and thus government officials say recover property valued at many millions seized by the alien property custodian during the war. She asserts her husband was naturalized at an unknown place in California, some time between 1869 and 1877, and that his certificate of naturalization and other papers later were lost at sea. Her action is an effort to have this alleged citizenship made a matter of legal record.

Offering Christmas Suggestions

With the calendar clicking off the shopping days before Christmas at an alarming rate, I advise you all to keep on your toes from now till it's time to hang up your stockings. And if you think calendars don't click you must admit that they have a disturbing way of telling the truth when you've put off a duty a little too long.

Hair Raising!

TRULY, I was scared when the square poster on the wall told me the date—and I had no present on the way to Bud in Honolulu! Before I recovered my balance I had rushed into the Arcade entrance on Douglas street, and finding myself in the Men's Hat department bought a cap of Alaskan Seal, with long flaps to protect the ears. I was hurrying back to the postoffice, to get my present on its way—and passing through the book department my eye fell upon a picture that threw me into Hysterics!

It was a magazine picture of an Hawaiian maiden in a colorful scheme of gold and brown—and among the things she didn't have on was a black seal skin cap! I suppose I could have returned the cap and been credited on my account—but the first way out of it I could think of was to mail the cap to Bud's pal in Canada. And I'm glad I did.

Sphinx!

AFTER all my excitement the problem of Bud's Christmas present was as far from solution as ever. I don't know how it ever would have been solved but for the kindly assistance of one of the saleswomen at the jewelry counter. She found a most unusual Masonic emblem, among the novelties in solid gold—and if Bud doesn't write and say he's tickled to death I won't write to him again for a month!

Diplomacy!

FASHION has tact. Have you noticed how short she's making the sleeves lately on the afternoon dresses and some of the smart tailored suits? It's because the new long gloves are so charming. And speaking of gloves, what could make a more acceptable Christmas gift? You need not be afraid your friends may be already supplied, for there are so many styles for so many different occasions, it would take quite a collection to be really called complete.

Method!

THE whole family agreed some time ago that one of us must give dad a new carving set. We felt sure he will do better work on the Christmas goose. I found a three-piece set with stag handles and made of the finest steel. Dad knows good steel when he sees it! He'll be so fussy about it he'll only let us get it out on big occasions, although, just because it is so good, it will stand daily use without losing a bit of its temper.

Left Handed!

SUCH consideration in choosing that Pyrex glass casserole for mother! It has a decorated lid of glass for use in the oven and again in serving. A nickel plated frame of ornate design makes it a worth while addition to any table service, and the best thing about it is they slipped in one of those handy little leaflets of recipes for casserole cookery.

Bull's-Eye!

YOU'LL hit the mark every time if you give those cute little pieces I saw at the neckwear counter. There are ribbon chokers in all colors, fancy lace collars and vests, collar protectors—and there's a thought—they fit inside your furs and protect the delicate silk and satin linings from the equally delicate cold cream and rice powder. Handy little pieces to brighten up everyday or dress frocks; appreciate gifts your friends will appreciate.

Blushes!

AND then I went and bought a tan leather traveling case. Tan is the men's color, you know. It had the spiffiest fittings of military brushes, comb, cloth brush, tooth brush holder and the like. It means one of my biggest problems satisfactorily settled, for men do love to be proud of their traveling accessories. For whom? A-Hem! Who desires this information?
