Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Marriage Without Love.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am 21 and loved by two men. I love one of them very dearly; the other I admire.

My family insist upon my marrying the one I admire, but I want the one I love. I may have to wait some time for him, as his circumstances are such that he cannot marry me now.

The one I admire has my family's sanction and would marry me at once. What shall I do? Can you please help me? It seems to me I would wait indefinitely.

My parents tell me I will learn to love the one I admire after we are married.

H. W. W. S. Marriage without love is a dangerous adventure—but, then, so is marriage with what youth sometimes mistakes for love. Do you also admire the man you think you love? Do you respect him and believe in him? Or does he just attract you? Don't marry a man for whom you don't care and care deeply. But above all, don't insist on sacrificing too much for an emotion that is not well grounded.

Would Be Friends. Dear Miss Fairfax: We have been taking The Omaha Bee for some time and I have enjoyed reading your column very much, but never once thought that I would also come to you for advice. We have some neighbors who have a girl my age and of course she and I were very good chums. She had a brother whom I went with for almost a year and then we broke up and since that this girl friend of mine won't have anything to do with me any more.

What shall I do? As I want to make up with my neighbors and they won't listen to me and I do not want to go with her brother.

BLUE EYES. Your neighbors may resent the fact that you do not care to go with the boy in their family. If that is all they have against you, they will soon see how silly they are and will be friendly with you again. Let the neighbors alone, being careful to treat them with ordinary courtesy if you chance to meet them, and saying nothing unkind about them to others. You only lower your own dignity and self-respect when you thrust yourself upon people who are ill-mannered. Give them time to think things over and when you see they are willing to be friendly and courteous, be big enough to forget the past and meet them too with kindness and good manners.

Mothers' Club. The meeting of the Mothers' club scheduled for December 29 has been postponed until January 5, when the club will meet for 1 o'clock luncheon at the home of Mrs. Zane Thompson.
