Ship Captain, 23, Quiets Mutiny By Pistol Play

Youth Cowers 12 Seamen and Forces Them to Sail Schooner From San Pedro to San Francisco.

San Francisco, Dec. 25.-Twelve hunger-crazed, fear-stricken seamen faced 23-year-old Captain E C. Gencreaux on the deck of his schooner, Rose Mahoney, as the ship slid and rocked in the seas of a heavy gale off

After nearly 70 days at sea a raging gale caught the five-master, stripped it of its sails and nearly sent it to the bottom. The food supply was gone, the pangs of hunger were on the men. Captain Genereaux, the youngest clipper-ship captain of an American vessel, had orders to go to San Francisco. When the storm abated the ship was off San Pedro several hundred miles down the coast. Captain Genereaux gave orders to "tack" and make for the home port farther away. It was then that the crew attempted to take things into their own hands. They deserted their posts and demanded that the vessel put in to San Pedro Orders were orders to the young captain and he told the crew that they must make for San Francisco. Like a flash the sparks of discontent and strife rose in a flame of mutiny. The men tried to take com-

With that he drew two revolvers. The men returned to quarters. Several days later another ship was sighted and food was secured for the men of the Rose Mahoney. She ar-
