Few Candidates Have Cinches on Assembly Jobs

Several Aspirants in Sight for President Pro-tem of Nebraska Senate and Speaker Of the House.

Lincoln, Dec. 27.—(Special.)—
With the session of the legislature only a week away, there appears to be very few candidates for legislative jobs who have a "lead-pipe cinch" on the offices. In the senate the present secretary, Clyde Barnard, appears to have no opposition.

That body will have back 14 of the old members who are so well actuainted with the work of Mr. Banard that they are fully satisfied that he should remain in office. On the of this there are a half dozen or more former members of the house or the constitutional convenhouse or the constitutional conven-

house or the constitut onal convention who are also well acquainted with his work and have no desire to make any change.

This may also be said of Jerry Wilhelm, who represented Postmaster-General Burleson in the senate the last session and handed out the mail with efficiency. It is understood also that James Howell of Albion, who was assistant sergeantal-arms of the senate last session. at-arms of the senate last session. will probably be retained, as every-one was satisfied with his work. Out-side of these three places, senate positions are still in doubt.

President Pro-tem. There are several candidates for president pro-tem of the senate. The president pro-tem of the senate. The lieutenant governor by constitutional provision is the presiding officer of that body, but a president pro-tem is elected to take the place of the lieutenant-governor in his absence. During the last session the lieutenant-governor told the senate caucus that the man selected by his associates as their temporary presiding officer would be called to the chair frequently. This year it is probable also that the office will be made one of not only honor but service.

also that the office will be made one of not only honor but service.

There are several candidates, none of which may be considered active. Senator W. V. Hoagland of North Platte, Senator Dennis Cronin of O'Neill, Senator C. H. Randall of Randolph, and Senator Charles A. Saunders of Omaha are the old members who are frequently mentioned. bers who are frequently mentioned for the place, while R. H. Norval of Seward appears to have some strong backing for the position. Honor in Office.

That the office of president protem carries with it considerable henor and service was shown in the governor was called to be acting gove nor of the state once in the regular session and once in the special session and President Pro-tem B. Byrum of Bloomington, Robert Druesdow of Omaha and Dan McLeod of Schuvler are mentioned among the possiblities for that position from among the old members, while Walter Anderson of Lincoln is also a candidate.

Candidates for Chief Clerk. For chief clerk, Will Hitchcock, clerk of the last session, is again a candidate, as is Frank P. Corrick of Lincoln. Hitchcock appears to have considerable opposition from many of the old members with whom he had trouble during the last session because of certain acts of the chief clerk, but Hitchcock row says that he has profited by his experience. Mr. Corricks who is recognized by a large number as fully competent because of previous service and also entitled to recognition because of his Men Convicted of Theft very valuable work in the last two campaigns, when he made good as manager of the sjeaker's bureau of the two state committees, appears to be very s'rong with both old and

For sergeant-at-arms of the house there are several candidates, among them Dr. Bass of Broken Bow and Henry Allen Brainerd, former president of the state press association and connected with the last session as proof reader.

Agree With New Constitution—Change in Code Bill Thought Likely.

Lincoln, Dec. 27.—(Special.)—With Christmas out of the way, people are beginning to look next to New Year and what it will bring. The thing which will mean most to the state is the coming legislature.
Not for years has a session of the state governing body faced such great problems as it will have to meet during the next four months. The new constitution, endorsed and put in force by the voters of the state at the November election, will go into force with the coming of the new year and one of the problems which the legislature will have to meet is to change all existing laws which may conflict with the new documents.

death of his wife. Osetta Little, 25, at Swedish Mission hospital Monday morning.

According to police, neighbors heard shots in the vicinity of Little's home at 2 a. m. Monday. Officer Lundell investigated but could not find the house from where the shots were heard and Mrs. Little rushed out, fatally wounded.

Officer Lundell went into the house, overpowered Little, who was still in possession of a rifle. He declared his wife had leaned over the rifle and had pulled the triggger. Little also said he had shot his wife because "she had trifled with his affections," according to police.

Police say Little had been drinking. A gallon of moonshine whiskey and a barrel of mash were found in the house.

May Revise Code Law. Another problem may be an at-tempt to change the existing code law. It is understood that Governor McKelvie will suggest amend-ments to the law in his message to the legislature. In the conference which he has held with the repre-sentatives of different activities of the state during the past few weeks he has endeavored to discover their needs and will without doubt be influenced somewhat by them in his message to the legislature.

The "blue sky" law will certainly meet with some changes if the feeling among people on the outside is taken into consideration. Some people are not at all backward in saying that they believe the present law is of more damage to the people of is of more damage to the people of the state than when there was no law covering the sale of stock. Buyer on Guard,

Heretofore when a stock salesman approached a prospective buyer it was up to the buyer to make an investigation of the proposition if he investigation of the proposition if he did not have faith in the agent. Under the present law many salesmen, so it is said, are not at all backward in representing that "this croposition has been fully investigated by the state and it has given its endorsement and backing." It has even been hinted that some salesman have left, the impression that because the state has put its endorsement on the sale of certain stock, that it guarantees against any loss, as i't does in the bank guarantee and lock and in the state has home November 12, though he had show the sale of the sale of
