McKelvie and Legislature on Friendly Terms

Fight Expected on Some of Governor's Proposals, But Strength of Opposition Is Unknown.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 8.—(Special.)
—Despite reports of open hostili-ties, political blooddrawing and near murder, Gov. S. R. McKelvie and the Nebraska legislature are on fairly friendly terms.

True, any number of legislators have "minds of their own" which contain ideas on legislation differing from the 11,000 words on that subject handed to them Thursday by Governor McKelvie in his mes-

Very, very few of them, however, are out fighting the governor. A few of his ideas don't satisfy their fancy and probably will come in for criticism and, possibly, the ideas of certain legislators on certain legislation will at the end of the session be on the statute books in preference to the governor's ideas. Don't Want Boss.

Take it as a whole, based on discussions with numerous members, Governor McKelvie, while not au idol or a Nebraska Moses in their eyes, has a diffident but friendly legislature to deal with at the opening.

"If he don't try to boss us we'll he all right," one member said to-

And that, in a nutshell, appears to be present day temper of the legis lators. They want to join hands with McKelvie and put over a series of constructive legislative acts that will put the largest republican legislative majority in history down as the greatest legislature in history.

Byrum of Franklin is looked upon as the leader in a fight to abolish certain officers. Byrum, when he ran for speaker of the lower house, didn't show much strength. Byrum is Leader.

At the time of his candidacy many members declared they wouldn't hack Byrum for speaker because of his known strength as a floor leader, which would be lost if he obtained the speakership. So, if many who favored Byrum actually voted for someone else for speaker in order to have a leader in the fight for abolishment of certain high salaried officers, there may be more anti-administrative code strength in the leg-islature than the speakership fight

With the fight for committee selections just ending and with legislators at home for the week-end listening to sentiment of "the boys" on McKele's proposals, the popularity of the McKelvie program at this time could be nothing except conjecture.
