

Man Who Cuts Way From Jail Caught in Chase

"Bad Negro" Severs Wire Netting Around Cell in City Bastille—Pursued for 12 Blocks by Police.

Watched by fellow prisoners in the "bull pen" at Central police headquarters yesterday afternoon while he quietly cut his way through the wire netting around the cell. Herbert Lewis, negro 2221 Willis avenue, described by police as a "bad man," broke all and escaped.

Lewis had been arrested only a short time before after a spectacular chase through the streets for more than 12 blocks by Detectives Munch and Trapp.

A pal of his escaped in the chase. Wanted for Holdups.

Lewis had been apprehended on investigation charges, being wanted by the police in connection with recent burglaries, holdups and robberies.

Police say he had already confessed to Acting Chief of Detectives Jack Pszanowski to a number of small holdups.

Lewis was placed in the "bull pen" at headquarters before being taken to the jail. Here he was in company with Carman (Joe) Boyles, bound over to the district court for robbery, and W. R. Husband, confessed highwayman, and other prisoners.

Unnoticed by anyone except his fellow prisoners, Lewis quietly began to work on the wire netting which held him prisoner.

Sneaks Through Court.

One by one, he broke the wires until enough had been severed to allow him to slip through, sneak into the courtroom, and out to freedom without being seen by any officer.

His absence was not noticed until the prisoners were lined up to be taken to the city jail and counted. Then one was missing, and a second checking disclosed that it was Lewis.

Because of his reputation for being a "bad man," every officer on the force was given explicit instructions to "bring him in."

Alleged Omaha Bank Robber To Be Brought Here for Trial

Harry Klein, alleged bandit, arrested in Peoria, Ill., last September in connection with the daylight robbery of the Farmers and Merchants bank at Benson on December 31, 1919, will be brought to Omaha on a charge of highway robbery, acting Chief of Detectives John Pszanowski stated today.

The Ocean Insurance company with headquarters in Chicago is pushing the prosecution of Klein. The alleged bandit fought extradition at the time of his arrest. He has since been released under heavy bonds, a charge of robbery standing against him in Peoria.

Postal Inspectors Ask Investigation of Stock Selling in Nebraska

Alleged "wild-cat" stock selling schemes in Nebraska that have fleeced numerous persons in this state out of millions of dollars will be investigated by a federal grand jury, United States District Attorney T. S. Allen announced yesterday. A federal grand jury to inquire into specific cases will be called into session within three months. Mr. Allen refused to disclose the identity of the companies under fire.

Postal inspectors have received numerous complaints of fraud in the sale of fake stock through the mails. A federal grand jury to investigate complaints of liquor cases will be called together in two weeks, the district attorney stated.
