IN THE SPRING a young man's fancy, we hear daily quoted, but there is another meaning. In the spring a young girl's fancy turns to thoughts of trousseau, wedding bells and the like—and then, too, the season just after Easter is always particularly beautiful.

When the first violets are hiding modestly 'neath their green leaves in the mossy woods one Omaha miss plans to become a bride. She is Miss Mildred Rhodes, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Rhodes, who is engaged to Ware Hall, son of Mrs. R. S. Hall. Miss Rhodes has decided upon the first week of lovely April for her nuptials.

Another wedding, which takes place when the crocus, the jonquil and the tulips first open their gaze to springtime, is that of Miss Mary Cooper of Pittsburgh and Burdette Kirkendall of this city. Their marriage will be an event of early April.

Tea for Former Omahans. Mrs. Edward Porter Peck entertained informally at tea at her home, Thursday afternoon, in honor of her guest, Mrs. F. B. Barkalow of Washington, D. C., who formerly resided here. City guests, all friends of Mrs. Barkalow, attended.

Informal Dinner. Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Deveraux had as their guests at dinner at their home Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. W. B. T. Belt and Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Clark.

Fort Omaha. Mrs. Malcolm D. Grimes will entertain members of the Fort Omaha Bridge club at the Officers' club of the post Friday afternoon. Four tables will be set for the game.

Wedding Date. The marriage of Miss Faye Simon, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank E. Simon, and Spray Gardner, will take place at the Simon-home Wednesday evening, February 26.

St. Elizabeth Guild. St. Elizabeths guild will hold a cake, candy and ice cream sale Saturday afternoon from 2 to 6 o'clock in the guild rooms at St. Barnabas church.

Food Sale. Ak-Sar-Ben Kensington club, O. E. S., will hold a food sale February 12, Saturday, in the Red Cross rooms of Masonic temple.

Informal Bridge. Miss Dorothy Balbach is planning an informal evening bridge at her home for next Tuesday evening.

Community Card Party. The Community club will give a card party at Crouse hall, Friday, 2:30 p. m.

Personals. Miss Louise Heitman has returned from a trip to New York.

George McNamara of Beemer, Neb., spent Wednesday and Thursday in Omaha.

Miss Vreda Birch of Topeka, Kan., who was the guest of Izetta Smith, has returned to her home.

Mrs. John E. Patterson of Kansas City, who is the guest of Mrs. Paul Gallagher, leaves Friday for her home.

A. J. Sitek left Wednesday for a two weeks' trip to New York. He will stop in Chicago on his return journey.

Miss Lorene Simmons of Detroit, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. H. G. Unverzagt, left Thursday for Chicago, enroute to her home.

Mrs. Barton Millard and Mrs. Paul Gallagher leave Friday, February 4, for Montreal to attend the Junior League convention. They will be gone several weeks.

Miss Harriet Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Crittenden Smith, who has been spending several months in the east, is now visiting friends in New York City. She will probably return to Omaha in the spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moreland, who were married in Lincoln Wednesday, are spending a few days in Omaha enroute east. Mrs. Moreland was Miss Gertrude Valentin. They will make their home in Lincoln.

Mrs. P. F. Zimmer and daughter, Lucille, leave Sunday for New Orleans. Mr. Zimmer will join them February 12 and the party will sail for Havana, Cuba, later returning to Miami, Fla., where they will remain until May 1. In the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Zimmer their home at 423 South Thirty-first street will be occupied by their daughter, Mrs. Dwight E. Williams, and Mr. Williams, who have been residing at Turner Court.

What Makes Flavor? Variety in flavor is a decided stimulant to appetite. But in order to gain this it is not necessary to have great variety in the foods you use. Much can be gained by a judicious and intelligent use of seasoning. But even more can be gained if you know how to vary flavor, through varying your method of cooking. Take corn meal, for instance. Boil it in water and you have corn meal mush with its characteristic flavor; then let this cool, slice it and fry it and you have an entirely different flavor. This new flavor, if you analyze it, consists of a combination of the crisp, parched corn—the result of the frying—and the soft inner portion. The butter or bacon fat, or other cooking oil that you use, may also enter into this new flavor. Some cooks save the grease that comes from frying sausages, and this may be used to add still a new flavor.

What's What

A Cleveland correspondent ("A. B. C.") writes to "What's What" as follows: "Dear Etiquette Editor—Is it good table manners, while holding bread or toast in the fingers and before eating it, to dip it in the tea or coffee cup, or into any substance on the plate, or to wipe off the plate with it? If not, what alternative is approved?"

Answer—It is distinctly bad form to dip bread or toast into any liquid. If the eater is afflicted with dental trouble and must have soft food it is more seemly to have this served in the form of milk toast, for which can be substituted tea toast or coffee toast, to be eaten with a spoon. People do not "wipe off the plate" in the dining room. If at the home table there is a delicious gravy served which the diner wishes to consume bread may be broken and a small portion of this can be dipped into the sauce with the fork which is used to convey the morsel to the mouth. When dining out, even this fork-dipping is to be avoided.

Daughter of Famous Surgeon to Wed Wedding invitations have been received in Omaha for the marriage of Phoebe Mayo, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., to Dr. Waltham Walters of this city, formerly of Omaha. The wedding will take place February 5. Among those invited from Omaha are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Skinner and Mr. and Mrs. Nels Updike. Mr. and Mrs. Skinner plan to attend. Mr. and Mrs. Updike being in California will be unable to do so.

For anything you have said. Apparently your friendship was a series of fuses. Happiness is not found that way. Build yours upon better beginnings.

In Sweden, a wife has the right to hear her own family name in conjunction with that of her husband.

A Letter to J. E. D. My Dear Miss Fairfax: I have just run across a letter by J. E. D. and can honestly say he is one gentleman and maybe the only one left to say he'd pick the girl with a nose like a marshmallow in preference to one with a shiny beak any day. Use some paint and powder and it sure does improve one's looks. I dress in style, have nice clothes but must say my dresses are neither real low neck nor are they to my knees, but nicely to my shoe tops.

He also said he had implicit confidence in women and could be depended on; that's more than lots of men say about we girls and women. And if J. E. D. is not married yet, I truly hope the Lord will bless him with the best little woman in all the world. And I, too, am strong for the modern miss and also for all men who think as much of we girls as J. E. D. does. MISS TWENTY.

Bobby: Don't nag your friend about another girl. Make yourself agreeable and attractive and even if there is "another" he will forget her. If he falls in love with some one else, your nagging won't help anyway.

Hopeful: You do need advice, as you say; want you to get it while you are young and remember it. A sharp tongue and a hasty temper head trouble upon their possessor. If you lose your temper and say mean things, you will have to bear the consequences. Learn while you are young to bridle your tongue. Control your temper and yourself. You will thank me all your life if you follow this advice. As to your boy friend, if he cares for you, he will give you an opportunity to show by your conduct that you are sorry

HOLDING A HUSBAND Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Way Lillian Diverted Mrs. Durkee's Attention.

Lillian made no outward sign either of interest or discomposure at Mrs. Durkee's announcement of her intention to investigate the looting of our home "all by herself." But L, who knew her so well, was watching her closely while Mrs. Durkee was talking and I saw the little lines at the corners of her mouth deepen, and her lips close tightly—sure sign that something has disturbed her.

"There is one thing on which I am sure you will agree with me, Lady," she said pleasantly to Mrs. Durkee—she has called the little woman "Lady" ever since I have known her—and that is that Madge has no business trying to straighten things over there until Jim and Katie come tomorrow.

"Of course not, but you can bet I'm going to look things over right away," the little woman replied. "And whatever are you going to do about tonight? You surely don't want to leave the house alone again."

"If we get it aired and warmed sufficiently, Lillian and I will sleep there," I interposed, guessing that Lillian wished a chance to marshal her mental forces to anticipate this projected visit of Mrs. Durkee to the scene.

Lillian thinks quickly. "Well, you don't take Marion into any such a place!" Her fluffiness returned, she bridled. "She'll stay right here with her Auntie Durkee. And now let's go over. You ought to look at your furnace again, anyway, Madge."

"It was all right when I went back a few minutes ago," I said still watching for some cut to indicate what Lillian wanted.

"How do you feel, Madge?" Lillian asked abruptly. "You look better." "Mrs. Durkee's tea," I smiled.

"Then I'd advise you to have another cup," she said, and I knew that I had received my cue.

"Will it be too much trouble?" I turned apologetically to Mrs. Durkee. "I'm afraid the pot is empty, but I would like another cup."

"Trouble!" she exclaimed hospitably. "As Alfred says, I'll 'soak you one' if you get off anything like that. I can heat some more water in a jiffy. Will you girls have some more?"

"Not I," Lillian rose lazily. "I feel like a tea ball now. Give me your keys, Madge. I'll stroll over and open up the house again, and shut some of those windows. You have a cold now, Lady."

"Don't waste your breath bothering about me," called back our little hostess on her way to the kitchen for more boiling water—she has an elaborate arrangement for boiling water at her tea table, but instantly dashes out to her gas stove when she wants it in a hurry. "Just what I need," she said, as she listened attentively to the oh's and ah's with which Mrs. Durkee commented on it.

"It's just like this in all the rooms," Lillian observed with an indifferent air. "They simply broke the locks and emptied the trunks. Of course, Madge can't tell later whether they've taken anything or not, and I'm not going to let her sort things till Katie comes to help her."

"That's only sensible," Mrs. Durkee agreed. Then she shivered. "You certainly have air enough in here," she said pettishly. "You mustn't stay here another minute," Lillian said energetically. "These windows have to be opened, but there's no need for you to stand in a draught. Besides, there's nothing to be seen here, and I want to take Madge to look for houses this afternoon. Come on downstairs. Do you want to lock these rooms, Madge? It's hardly necessary."

"I would," Mrs. Durkee protested. "I'd lock everything tight. And be sure to see that your furnace is all right before you leave the house. For you can just bet I wouldn't come into this house alone this afternoon if I knew it was going to burn down!"

She went down the stairs ahead of us, and I locked the bedroom doors, my own last, with a feeling of gratitude to Lillian for the way in which she had diverted little Mrs. Durkee's attention.
