The Bride's Dream of a Home

WHY not make that dream come true, as any normal young couple can who set their minds to it? "Where there's a will, there's a way." If you already have a little sum saved up, begin at once to plan your home.

The American Face Brick association, of which the Hydraulic Press Brick company, W. O. W. building, Fourteenth and Farnam, is a member, has devised, in an essay contest, a very clever way to give 25 brides an opportunity of getting complete working drawings, specifications and quantity estimates of a home free, with an offer to one of the 25 of face brick for a home free if selected from one of their representative offices. This with the understanding that the bride or young married woman has been married not over 10 years.

Fill in the following slip and mail to the Hydraulic Press Brick office for further information:

February Sale of Fashionable Fabrics.

WHEN I tell you that this great February Sale of Fashionable Fabrics is to be staged in no less place than the store of Thos. Kilpatrick & Company, 15th and Douglas, your interest will soar at once. Especially apropos too is a sale at this time when every woman is buying fashion magazines with an eager light in her eye, planning things not only for herself and big sister, but for every member of the household, yes, and for the household as well.

Economy silk is offered in all colors, this is the silk warp fabric so desirable for undies, dress linings and are uses. Last year, this silk was priced at $1.50, recently it sold for $1 and now the February sale price is 79c. This is just to give you an idea of how the prices throughout the sale list run.

Plain voile in dark, light and white has countless uses. Promenade voile is 69c, Superba voile 98c. Plain poplin for skirts and dresses is offered for 75c.

The D. & J. Anderson Gingham, queen of the gingham fabrics, offered at $1.50, the cheapest price at which they can be sold at the present time, a price which one of the officials of this great establishment pronounced in his drill manner as "too high." But what does "mere man" know of the crying urge a woman feels just before the summer to buy the very best and loveliest in the exquisitely tinted gingham? And really they're lovelier than ever before this year, rich in vivid colorings, exquisitely fine in quality. The 38-inch English and Scotch gingham, offered at the D. & J. Anderson gingham are reduced to $1 and $1.25 a yard. All $1 domestic fine quality 32-inch gingham are reduced to 75c a yard.

Printed voiles in attractive patterns, blockings and stripes on dark backgrounds, and the new summer dress, are offered at February sale prices of 69c and 98c; voiles formerly sold up to $2.

A 20 Per Cent Reduction on Quality Luggage.

THERE'S a stamp of unmistakable fastidiousness about a little personal bag at the Omaha Printing company, Thirteenth and Farnam, which makes it luggage of particular desirability. Of patent seal, beautifully finished, attractively rounded. One of the new imported silks has been chosen for the lining, a deep sand shade with bright threads of satin weave. Its durable, lustrous surface. Gold mountings assure the buyer that here is indeed a bag for lifetime service. A gift ideal to a loved one who is about to depart for southern climes! And if you're interested in the fitted handbags suitable alike for the business woman or debutante, there's an inconspicuous little dull leather bag, almost square in outline, whose rose silk lining is ivory fitted in manner most satisfactory, for there's adequate room to carry a blouse change in case one is invited out to dinner. One of the most distinctive bag arrivals is an almost-flat bag of patent seal with dull blue silk lining shirred most cunningly with an unusual amount of roominess in its nockets.

Let's Go Shopping with Polly

Under the snow
Are roots to blow
So soon with daffodils,
And buds prepare
The cowslips' wear,
Buried below the hills.

Shall love be lost
In tardy frost
When other flowers are free?
Or, less than birds,
Shake happy words
As blossoms from the tree?

O love, make haste,
Or time will waste
The habit of your lute;
Prepare your string
To play the Spring,
Or be forever mute.

Within the brake
So soon shall wake
The building birds to sing,
And folded now
In every bough
Are brides of the Spring.

Maternity Corsets of Scientific Value. MIdly, I wish I could find words strong enough to express the value of Dorothy Hill's maternity corset as an uplifting support to women who are in need of such a corset. My Dears: AN Electric Mode—Youth-Endowing! "How fascinatingly becoming! How insistently Young!" exclaims Madame when she sees the garments that have arrived for Spring, 1921. Madame la Mode chooses always her metier, and this year it is Youth. One is reminded that youth is definite, for these garments are extremely definite; they are jaunty or gay, winsome or colorful; they have temperament—vivacity. Embroideries are like a voice out of Egypt, ancient, yet ever young, and the straight young lines are Egypt, too. Sometimes there's a sense of the Apache, and again, of dignity, but one comes upon the garments of Spring intensely aware of their unquestionable individuality—perhaps to suit the very definite characters of les Americaines!

When Friends Come in Unexpectedly on Sunday Afternoon. PHONE down to the Flatiron Cafe, Seventeenth and St. Marys avenue, Tyler 5199, and reserve a table for your crowd to be entertained at dinner, which is served from 5:30 to 7:30, or for a delicious supper. You'll find an expression of wondrously heart-warming hospitality.

An Exposition of Exquisite Spring Chapeaux in Sunday Windows. JUST returned from New York is Miss Heitman of the Heitman Hat Shop, Eighteenth and Douglas, Athletic Club building, with a showing of chapeaux to take one's breath away. In the Sunday windows will appear such exquisites as this from designers of world-wide repute: Blue and gold-green taffeta, wide and low-crowned with shirred cord finish round edges. Shell-pink and silver rolled brim confection with blue, gray and gold yarn tracers. Kindergarten braided tam in blue and sand ribbon. Wide-brimmed navy hair braid model, whose taffeta crown has turned down fold to give emphasis to new flat, wide crown. Flat crowns, but yes, madam, with the hat worn much higher on the head!

A French novelty plush, imitating monkey fur, is for fringe and borders.

The Whole Great Airy Fifth Floor. OF the Brandeis Stores has been converted into a display room for china, art pottery, bathroom fixtures, stoves, hardware of all kinds, Pyrex baking glass and wicker baskets. If you'd secure a viewing of the most complete kind of everything for dining room, bath and kitchen, take the South elevator, as those on the north side do not make this floor.

Expert decorators have planned the position of the different displays, subtly arranging iridescent china of grays, blues, witching greens, stained art glass, massed Pickard china and glass, the hand-decorated gold ware, cut glass tables and art pottery down the center of the room so that their exquisite effect is the first seen upon entering the great display room. Particularly lovely are the silken shaded lamps to be found here from the tiniest imaginable Boudoir conception to the stately hall floor lamps. One-third off is offered on the English china in one quaint chintzy design, that fascinating Coalport Bone china. A striking reduction is also offered on the breakfast sets, one 26-piece set being priced at $5.98; another 36-piece set of Nippon china is but $3.98.

Looking down the interesting vista of displays on this floor, one is at once impressed by the versatility of wares offered; and of extreme beauty on a table near electric fans; wicker bird cages, clothes hampers and baskets of all kinds, washing machines, aluminum ware, cutlery, hardware, paints, soaps and cleaning compounds, bathroom fixtures and stoves. A department which Mrs. Omaha is finding exceedingly to her liking.
