He's Deceiving.

What does he look like? Well, as a rule he makes a pretty close appreach to a human being, with his clothes and all to help carry out the deception. But you can't limit him to any set class of type. You might find him in the rough outfit of a taxi driver and again you are likely to find him in the garb of a man of means.

The best way to recognize him is to observe his attitude towards the ladies who pass his pavement fast-ness. You'll always find him giving the girls all of bis optical and vocal attention. He responds more quickly to the "chicken" variety. But he is not averse to the comely miss.

Where They Park.

Pavement spaces between corner cigar stores and the curb are the favorite lairs of these lizards. The next best hunting grounds for them are in the immediate vicinity of a theater. Dangling nonchalantly over the curb or backed up comfortably against a cigar store or theater building, they wait for the propitious moment to ply their business.

And what is their business? Oh nothing much-just annoying pass-ing girls with barrages of invitations to join tthem in a walk-or a "movie." Some of the more or a "lizards" hand out dinner invitations promiscuously. Those of the taxi-driver type offer free rides.

Don't get the "curbstone lizard" confused with the "limousine liz-ard." The latter sometimes wears a silk hat and instructs his chauffeur to drive up close to the curb of a sidewalk when a pretty woman is passing. His dope is to lean out, silk hat in hand, cavalier-like and with suave voice ask the passing fair one to keep him company on a little motor trip. With all of his glitter and polish the "limousine" species may be more deadly than the pavement chameleon.

But they are both here-and the girls are asking what one is to do when one is accosted without any reason by them-insulted and embarrassed. Well, rat poison is as good as anything for such "varmints."
