What's What
By HELEN DECIE

When pairing off partners for a dinner party the hostess should try to group her guests in congenial couples, so that, by no chance, can two antagonistic spirits be forced to sit together, even for an hour. If a pair are unacquainted with each other the hostess presents the man to the woman and informs both that they are to go in to dinner together. If she has an opportunity to do so, the wise hostess manages to convey to the feminine partner some word of the man's personality, so that it will be possible to make the right conversational lead in table talk. If the two are not "strangers yet," the hostess merely tells the man when he arrives whom he is to take to dinner and he proceeds at once to present himself to his partner.

When dinner is announced the man offers his right arm to the woman and they join the procession to the dining room, where he seats her in the place indicated before he takes his own chair.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

What Lillian Confided to Madge.

Lillian told me afterward that my lower jaw descended so far and so rapidly at Mr. Jones' announcement of the sale figure of the house at which we were looking that she feared I never would be able to get it back into place again. I remember only that for several seconds I was unable to speak. Then I murmured feebly:

"Forty thousand—for this?"

I did not mean to be as rude as my voice sounded. Mr. Jones stiffened perceptibly.

"Indeed, yes, and a very reasonable figure it is, too. You must remember the housing situation—"

Lillian's face was truculent. I saw that for some reason or another she was deeply annoyed, and I hastened to terminate the embarrassing situation.

"I am afraid we have unconsciously misled, Mr. Jones," I said with all the dignity I could muster, though I felt anything but dignified.

"Forty thousand dollars is far more than we could possibly invest in a home. If you have anything to show us for less than half that sum we shall be glad to look at it. But this sort of thing is preposterous."

I do not know whether he caught my full meaning, for I relied as much to the exorbitant price set on the property as I did to my inability to touch the figure, but his florid face reddened still more, and he said with a touch of stiffness:

"We will go back and look at the places we have advertised. Those are probably within your means."

The Search Continued.

It may have been only the hallucination of my own sensitiveness, already irritated, but I never have heard anything quite so subtly deprecative and maddening as the phrase "within your means," uttered in the manner Mr. Jones used it. I think he was thoroughly annoyed at finding we belonged to the lower stratum of purchasers, for he strode ahead of us down the path to the gate.

"I warn you, Madge," Lillian murmured to me as we sedately followed him, "that I shall be arrested for murder before this day is over. There are two phrases that make me see blood. One is 'everything has gone up because of the war.' Of all the miserable profiteering, thieving slogans that ever misled, second-story work, old-fashioned burglars would blush at those are the worst! I've managed to control myself so far, but if that old goat gets off any more such spiels as that little 'within your means' stunt I shall forget that I am a lady, a descendant of a proud southern or northern or western or western family, and soak him one."

I smothered a giggle I couldn't help at Lillian's nonsense, and walked more rapidly to the gate, climbed into the car and started it, demurely accepting Mr. Jones' rather chilly instructions as to direction.

"Great Possibilities."

"We will look at the acre property first," he said loftily.

Alas for my dreams of a tumble-down place which Dicky and I could remodel according to our own fancy as we had begun to do with the Marvin home! As we drew up to the "acre property" I felt like paraphrasing the old nursery question: "Acre, acre, who's got the acre?" A small house, attractive enough with vines clambering over it, stood within 15 feet of the sidewalk on a narrow lot.

The houses on either side were so close that with windows open the neighbors could chat as cozily as if they were in the same house. A lone lilac bush occupied the front yard, but we could see glimpses of taller trees back of the house.

TO DARKEN HAIR
APPLY SAGE-TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautiful, dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store, all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared and the hair after application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

Noses and Throats
Freed of Catarrh!

Hundreds of noses and throats all over this country from Maine to California have been freed from Catarrh with its annoying features. These noses and throats were pretty bad cases of them. They had bothered their owners for long periods. The noses had been stopped up—crusts formed—mucus gathered and made discharges which had to be constantly blown out on handkerchiefs.

Some of them had dropped into the throats belonging to the above noses and made them raw and sore, with an annoying, efficient tickling sensation.

Little wonder that the eyes accompanying these noses and throats became watery and weak—the breaths foul and the sense of small gradually disappearing.

But what a change has come over these noses and throats through the method of treatment originated by Catarrh Specialist, Sproule, 192 Trade Building, Boston. They became once again the clear, sweet, useful organs of the body their Creator intended. The nasal discharges stopped, because there was no more inflammation and Catarrh germ to cause it. The eyes, the noses, the throats became free and clear. Those stupid dull feelings vanished and the happy individuals met their friends frankly grateful they needed no longer worry over what serious thing their Catarrh might develop into.

Recipe to Make a
Gray Hair Remedy

A. L. Paulson, M. D., who has practiced medicine in New York City for many years, gave out the following recipe for a home-made gray hair remedy: "Gray, streaked or faded hair can be quickly turned black, brown or light brown, whichever shade you desire, by the following remedy that you can make at home:

"Merely get a box of Orfex powder at any drug store. It costs very little and no extra tax to buy. Dissolve it in 2 oz. of distilled or rain water and comb it through the hair. Full directions for use and a gold bond guarantee come in each box.

It is safe, does not rub off, is not sticky or greasy and leaves the hair fluffy. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."

"Did you say there was an acre here?" I asked.

"Oh, yes! Just come back here and see. The best part of this property is in the rear."

From sheer curiosity we followed him back of the house, which had several queer little ells and outbuildings, through a quaint little back yard with several wonderful trees, to a fence, over which Mr. Jones waved his hand.

"There's land enough for you," he said proudly.

We faced a lot as narrow in front as the one on which the house stood, but, stretching to the next street, with not a single tree on it. I looked at it a minute and turned on my heel without a word.

"Now," began Mr. Jones, "there are great possibilities in this place."

"Yes," said Lillian enthusiastically, "there are. You could move the house back, Madge, to the edge of this lot, buy the place on either side, tear the houses down, plant a lot of those big trees that cost about $500 apiece, and you'd have a wonderful place."

Mr. Jones looked at her with cold disapproval.

"I hardly think that would be practicable, madam," he said, and I bent hastily over a pretended loosened shoe lace to hide the laughter which I could not suppress.
