Mrs. Kittleson in Interesting Lecture

Effie Steen Kittleson gave the second of a cycle of six interpretative talks on the psychology of expression and the correlation of the arts at her studio Wednesday noon at 12, to an audience of more than 50. Her lectures thus far have emphasized the importance of body plumb and abandonment, through which come grace and poise.

"We learn to gesture," the speaker said, "so we can eliminate gestures. We use gestures not for their own sake but to secure abandonment. The word 'natural' is often used when 'habitual' is meant. Only 10 per cent of the adults are in plumb. It is impossible to be in plumb without deep breathing. Five good deep breaths when we feel oppressed will help pull us together."

Mrs. Kittleson devoted much of her talk to a chart which is the basis of expression through gestures. She applied the teachings of the chart to painting, music and sculpture as well as to the drama. The fundamental principles underlying all sciences or all things possible, are found in the trinity, the body, the voice and the mind," said the speaker, quoting Delsarte. The subject of the lecture next Wednesday at 12 is "Perspective," which embodies the development of the imagination.

Citizenship School Is Assured

A citizenship school to be conducted by Mrs. H. H. Wheeler is assured. Attending a meeting at the Fontanelle Wednesday afternoon to discuss the subject were Mrs. Halleck Rose, general chairman and representative of the former Equal Franchise society; Mrs. Irving Baxter, Mrs. Charles Hubbard, Mrs. M. M. Levings and Mrs. E. W. Gunther of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. E. M. Sykes of the Omaha Drama League; Mrs. A. V. Kinsler, Tuesday musical; Mrs. Charles Tracy, D. A. R.; Mrs. C. L. Hempel and Mrs. H. J. Bailey, Omaha Woman's club; Mrs. C. A. Rhoden, Miller Park Mothers' club, and Minnie Lusa society; Mrs. James Shields, American War Mothers.

This group espoke a desire for the school and pledged its support. It was agreed that Friday afternoons at 2:30 o'clock would be the best time for the weekly lessons, which will extend over a period of 10 weeks. February 25 was set as the opening day.

"There is no woman better qualified in any of the states for this work," said Mrs. Rose, referring to Mrs. Wheeler.

Mrs. E. L. Burke, 3646 Burt street, will act as treasurer for the school, receiving money for the tickets, which will be distributed within the week.

Clubdom

D. A. R. Notes. The members of Stephen Bennett chapter, D. A. R., of Fairmont, entertained their state regent, Mrs. F. J. Ringer, of Lincoln, at an informal reception Monday evening at the home of Dr. Nelle Deffenbaugh. Flags and a color motif of the national emblem were used in the decorations.

The address of welcome by the chapter regent, Mrs. M. M. Akin, was followed by an interesting and instructive talk by Mrs. Ringer, who also read an address entitled "The Deeper Meaning of Our Organization," by the president general, Mrs. George M. Minor.

Mrs. Ringer was also a guest Tuesday at a patriotic luncheon given at the Clarendon hotel, nine members of the chapter being present.

Holding a Husband

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Favor Mrs. Durkee Asked. "I am afraid, Madge," Lillian said quietly, as Edith, evidently mollified, went downstairs in search of Mrs. Durkee. "That this will spoil our plan of spending tonight in your house and going over those papers in your room. We shall be busy here until late, and I know that the idea of our staying over there alone will upset Her Fluffiness. She will be certain that the marauders of last night will be back again thirsting for our gore."

"If I were on the witness stand, under oath," I returned smiling, "I am afraid I would have to confess that I am distinctly relieved. Besides, Lillian, besides, Katie is gone. I think Mrs. Durkee will be so occupied tonight and tomorrow that she will have no time to investigate that room, and tomorrow night Alfred and Leila will be here."

"And there will be no room for us," Lillian laughed. "Besides, Katie and Jim are coming in the morning, aren't they? I confess I shall enjoy the house better after they have had a chance to put it in order."

"But can't you see Katie's face when she first sees that mess over there?" I asked.

"Oh, Old Sammy!" Lillian assented. "But you are the lucky lady that Katie is quite a member of the family. The modern servant—if there be one left—would give one glance at the house and shake the dust from her feet as she left."

"Katie will not be particularly quiet upon the subject," I said, with a grim little foretaste of my faithful but tempestuous little maid's dismay. "I think for the sake of discipline I shall banish every one else when I first show her the rooms. It will never do to let any outsider hear her outburst. I would be compelled to fire her on the spot."

"Oh! no, you wouldn't!" Lillian commented dryly. "That really isn't being done these days, you know."

"I laughed, and she spoke again, hurriedly. "I think we'd better go over there right away before dinner, see to the furnace, and lock the doors and windows. And isn't there some man in the village you could hire to patrol the place tonight? It would probably relieve Mrs. Durkee's nervousness."

"Our Sub-Conscious Self." "The only man available as a watchman in the village is an old chap, more calculated to excite one's nerves than to soothe them," I returned smiling. "He is a very fussy, nervous little man, who carries an old-fashioned revolver—positively flourishes it in fact. He is convinced that he is Sherlock Holmes invested with the astral body of Lupin, and the way he camouflages his movements is most upsetting to a nervous person."

"Lovely! Lovely!" Lillian said delightedly. "If you don't give me a chance to see him I'll never speak to you again."

"I'll take you down with me in the car when I go to hunt him up," I promised, just as Mrs. Durkee appeared at the door.

She was too well bred to utter a question aloud, but her expressive little face was complete interrogation point, and I hastened to explain. "Oh, old Sammy!" she said, and laughed heartily. "Do get him, by all means. I always give him some hot coffee whenever he's in this neighborhood on any errand, and I always get all the gossip of the village in return."

"She checked again at some remembrance of the queer old man, then uttered a swift ultimatum. "You'll just have time before dinner to get those things done," she said, "so run along, and I'll start pulling my room to pieces. Only— I wish one of you would tell Edith of the change in my plans for Leila's room. She's angry. I know, and I'm afraid she'd freeze me before I could get my explanation out, and then I'd be sure to lose my temper, and—"

She hesitated, looking pathetically at us.

"Edith has been told," Lillian said smiling. "I thought you'd like to have that little job off your hands."

"Her Fluffiness stared at Mrs. Underwood.

"Is there anything in the world you don't think of?" she asked.

"Not much," I interrupted before Lillian could speak.

Her answer, when it came, was brusque, as it generally is when any praise is given her.

"Suppose you two stop trimming the Christmas tree and get to work," she said. "Come, Madge!"

Little Mrs. Durkee made a gamine-like move at Lillian's back as she turned away.

"If I had to be a clam," she said dramatically, "I'd stick my head out of the shell once in a while just to see what it seemed like."

There was a note of relief in Lillian's laughter as we went down the steps and crossed the lawn toward our house.

"Her Fluffiness is herself again," she said. "She'll do now to meet her new daughter-in-law, but I wouldn't have given 2 cents for their chances of happiness together if she had continued in the mood she was in when she first fixed up that room."

She paused, but I did not interrupt her, for I felt that the most important part of her thought was to come.

"Do you know," she went on earnestly, "that our subconscious self is a terrible and wonderful thing. That little woman actually has been hating Leila without knowing it, and her subconscious hate made her plan the color scheme of that room with diabolical cleverness. But she has come to herself, praise be, and the hidden venom which might have poisoned Leila's happiness has spent itself harmlessly in cream-colored draperies! Don't you think so?"

I nodded assent, the while my brain was busy with the question as to what dangerous emotion my own subconscious self might be cherishing. Lillian's theories and her graphic way of putting them are disturbing sometimes.

Uric Acid Poisoning (By Dr. N. C. Cook) A poison as dangerous as strychnine is manufactured within our own bodies, called uric acid. When it accumulates in the body and the kidneys fail to carry it off we suffer from dull headache, sleeplessness, muscular pains, lumbago or it may cause rheumatism or gout. The uric acid can be seen in the cloudy sediment in the water—what is called the "brick dust," noted on the sides of the vessel containing it—after a few hours' standing. The water is scant, high-colored, strongly acid and this should be a danger sign, and if not taken in time by cutting out the meat, tea and alcohol may end in rheumatism or gout.
