My Prayer. By SCOTTIE MCKENZIE FRASER. To live not long but well, I pray. Clean, upright, honest and sincere; Let me be like in little things. And brave when trials come. Let me not condemn nor scorn my weaker brother. But always know he does the best he can. And that none but God Can completely understand. If sickness, failure or suffering should be my fate. Give me courage to meet Each as a soldier bravely. And when the last Great Adventure comes, May I go smiling.

What's What

Mother love is one thing and transferred egotism is quite another. When she becomes a wife and mother the woman whose girlhood had been obsessed with personal vanity is likely to be unduly vain of her children—merely because they are hers. She magnifies their every little accomplishment and she boasts about them to all comers, even in their presence—frequently to their embarrassment, for whether by reaction or through paternal heredity the sons and daughters of a boasting mother are apt to be unusually modest and reticent.

Mrs. Myne-Eyde imagines that she is useful. She wants her children instead of herself. She does not know that it is as ill-bred to brag of one's own children as to boast of any other personal possessions. (Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Co.)

Federated Club Notes. York club women open most of their meetings with singing, and practice has enabled them to sing well, according to the York Daily News-Times. At a meeting of the civics department of the York Woman's Departmental club Tuesday evening, a committee was appointed to confer with the president of the York County Community club to take steps to establish a county library. Miss and Mr. In many a household where a large staff of servants is kept it is the rule that after the children reach their teens they are called "Miss" or "Mr." but before that time the servants show no disrespect in calling them by their first names. Now the idea of a mother's insisting that a nurse should address her little 2 or 3-year-old charges in any way but this is really absurd, yet the custom, among those who have wealth and inclination to insist on the formalities, is growing to insist on the use of "Miss" and "Master" for children even when they are toddling. So one has to suppress a smile sometimes when a competent, thoroughly dignified six foot butler speaks of a harem-scram 3-year-old who is in awe of no one in the house but that very butler as "Master Thomas," and of the little 5-year-old lassie for whom she feels a great natural tenderness and devotion as for his own children as "Miss Alice." Still that is the custom in many places and it at least has the advantage that servants never get into the habit of calling youngsters by their first names. Miss and Mr. when they reach their teens.

Few big game hunters in the Yukon are as well known as Mrs. W. W. Dickinson, a middle-aged woman who has hunted moose, caribou, deer, mountain goats and bears for many years in immense stretches of territory which are still marked "unexplored" on recent maps of the far north.

Problems That Perplex

Mother and Daughter. Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a girl of 18 and am worried. I am allowed to keep my earnings and also have a savings account. My folks are very strict with me; they don't allow me to go any place unless they are with me. Do you think that I am too young to powder (I do not mean to dip my face in a barrel of flour, but just a little)? I have met some very nice boys and they have asked me if they could come over and spend an evening. I asked my mother and she says that I am too young. If I ask her if I could go over to some other girl's house they first inquire if there are going to be any boys, and if yes I can't go. The other girls I go with are same age as they are allowed to have a party and have boys and girls, but I can never attend. I have talked over the matter with my mother, but she will not allow me to have any boy friends. Is that sensible? I told her that I would ask you and she said that you would agree with her. I don't think so; at least I hope not. Mother also wants to write to you so you can have both sides of the story. Thanking you in advance I remain, Yours, HOPEFUL.

Dear Miss Fairfax: The only reason that I bring her up this way is because I was brought up the same way and believe that I should bring my child up in the same way. Do you think I am right? When she comes home from work she has her supper ready, reads the paper and then plays the piano or looks at 9 or 10 o'clock goes to bed. Isn't that enough for a girl of her age? We take her to a moving picture show once every two weeks, but she is a MOTHER. Dear Mother and Daughter: I don't know when anything has pleased me as much as your letter. I think you have a very good idea of how to talk things over together as you have done, they ought to be able to settle things pleasantly without my help. I want to help you, though, if I can.

Early to Bed. "You little goose!" she cried. "Of course everything is all right. She's arranging for some things tonight, and I'm to meet her at 9 o'clock at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, prepared for a strenuous time. You be sure that you have every task out of the way so we can all get busy on the draperies the minute I get home that noon train. I'll leave you a note for an errand girl. She does very nicely, but I can't say. If I don't forget what I go after, Auntie Durkee," the child laughed, but flushed at the same time, with an evident remembrance of some embarrassing occasion. "You wouldn't forget for Auntie Durkee, my lamb, I know that." Mrs. Durkee returned with a loving glance at Lillian's daughter, whom she adores and spoils, as do we all, "And now, everybody to bed," decreed Lillian. "For we have a most hectic day in front of us. Where do we sleep, fair hostess?" "You'll occupy the bridal suite," Mrs. Durkee announced grandly. What Happened at 2 A. M. "Who are you to be interfering between my lamb and me?" Mrs. Durkee demanded. "If you don't behave I'll keep her out of here and not let her go back to New York."

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home. Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare. Do not have out about it. Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup. To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2 1/2 ounces of Pine in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can use for three times the money. It is pure, good and tastes very pleasant. You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that makes business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistent loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pine and Syrup combination will stop it usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment. Pine is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous all over the world for its prompt effect upon coughs. Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pine" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pine-Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Thing Midge Saw from Her Window. Mrs. Durkee and I worked to such advantage that by the time Edith and Lillian finished their work below stairs, we had transferred every vestige of cream and olive draperies from Lillian's room to that of her mother-in-law. When everything was in place Her Effluence clasped her hands together like a child and gave a child's ecstatic sigh. "Oh!" she breathed. "Isn't it perfect? I've dreamed of my room looking like this, but I never thought I could afford it. And now I'm 'fording' two," she added with a little light-hearted chuckle that I was afraid masked considerable pecuniary sacrifice. For Mrs. Durkee's income, outside what Alf gives her, is very slender, and I guessed that she had furnished her new daughter's room from her own money. When Edith and Lillian came upstairs they found her still gazing at her handiwork. We had heard the clatter of the dinner dishes as they had been cleared away and washed—once Lillian at the telephone, and once the incongruously deep tones of old Sammy's voice, so we knew that their telling us that their tasks also were completed. But little Mrs. Durkee was not content with the assurance of her own ears. She rushed at Lillian the moment she appeared. "Is everything all right?" she asked. "Well, of course, it is a pretty big task for her," Lillian began mischievously, then, as she saw Mrs. Durkee's lips drop like those of a grieved child, she put her hands on the little woman's shoulders and shook her affectionately.
