

$5,500 Awarded Hospital Nurse Shot by Omahan

Young Cincinnati Woman Wins Suit Against Estate Of Man Who Killed Self After Affair.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 22.—(Special Telegram)—The strange shooting of Miss Etzel Graves, 23, a nurse now residing at 210 West Twelfth street, this city, but formerly a nurse at the branch tuberculosis city hospital, by a wealthy patient, James Kane of Omaha, Neb., who then committed suicide, was recalled in superior court here today when Miss Graves was given an uncontested verdict for $5,500 against the estate of the man who shot her.

The suit was against Thomas Kane, administrator of the estate of James Kane. The latter was stopping with a sister at 1201 Bates avenue here before going to the branch hospital.

On the witness stand Miss Graves detailed the short interview which resulted in the shooting and suicide the night of June 8.

"I was on night duty at the hospital and knew Kane only in a casual way," she testified. "About 9 he came into the room. He said, 'I have come to say good bye. I am going west.'"

Miss Graves said she returned a farewell of her wishes.

"Then," she testified, "he advanced closer and closer to me and said 'I don't believe you love me like I do you, my darling, before I fully realized what he was doing he had shot me three times.'"

Miss Graves was in a hospital five weeks and it was feared she would not live. She still has a bullet in her jaw. She sued for $10,000. The probate court records do not disclose that Kane left any local estate, but attorneys for Miss Graves said an attempt will be made to discover the proceeds of a large amount of gilt-edged stock which Kane sold in anticipation of his trip west to his Omaha home.

The bill provides for the standardization of the weight of bread loaves, with the weight marked plainly on each loaf.

Man Begins Penitentiary Term for Burning Own Mill

Kearney, Neb., Feb. 22.—(Special.)—Warren Ewell, owner of the Blue Mills of Glenwood, was taken to Lincoln to begin his sentence of from one to 10 years in the state penitentiary. No reason can be advanced for his having set fire to the property and Ewell waves all queries aside with a

Platte River Hermit, Hunter By Day, Star Gazer By Night

Intruded in a formidable cave, deep in the fastnesses of the virgin wilderness along the banks of the Platte river near the state fisheries, lives a man.

He's unkempt and he has a piercing eye—but he knows the stars, the moon and nature.

Barfoot, he spends his days hunting—anything and everything—and his nights he studies the heavens.

He answers to the name of Old Henry and he's known as the Platte River Hermit.

His past—no one knows. His present—little is known of that.

His future—he used to boast he'd live to be 200 years old, but Time has laid a heavy hand on the old man's shoulders and he has abandoned that idle dream.

Gathers Food. The hermit gathers acorns and dandelion roots, which he stores in his cave for future food.

But of late years he has been gathering the food left by the parties of motorists who visit the state fisheries near by.

Old Henry walks a great deal. He's always tramping through the woods he loves so well, but a certain portion of his time he devotes to the commission bill in its place. The committee bill was killed in the senate a few days ago.

Firm Defrauding Farmers Probed By Authorities

Eleven Officials of Consumers' Service Company, Doing Business in Many States, Are Indicted by U. S.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—Indictments charging 11 officials of the Consumers' Service company with using the mails to defraud farmers of more than $250,000 in the last five years through the sale of "service contracts" were made public today by postal inspectors.

A. P. Claraham, inspector in charge of the Chicago end of the investigation, said that farmers in 22 states had been swindled.

In return for contracts calling for $20 to $100, the company, Claraham said, promised to sell dry goods, farm implements, groceries and other lines of merchandise at reduced prices.

The indictment charges that letters said the company could buy more direct for the consumer, thereby eliminating middlemen's profits. The indictment alleged the farmers were not rendered the services promised.

Inspector William J. Marles of Minneapolis told me the only goods sold to farmers were second-hand or purchased at bargain sales," Claraham said.

The indictment was returned last October in Minneapolis, it was said.
