WHAT would American "fiddies" do if there were but one doll to every 125 children? An impossible situation so it seems, for here in our own country nearly every little girl has at least one, if not several dollies of all ages and sizes. Dolls with yellow hair, dolls with blue eyes, dolls that "go to sleep," walking dolls, talking dolls, and a dozen other varieties crowd the shelves and are carried home daily by fond parents to a waiting Mary Jane, or Betty Ann.

Away over in Sidon, Syria, however, there is only one doll for 125 children. Miss Josephine Huse, formerly a Nebraska girl, an Alpha Phi, is located there in charge of an orphanage for Syrian waifs. Under her direction care is taken of 250 children. In this orphanage are only two dolls, but they are very much loved, those two. No provision of any kind is made for toys for the little ones.

Miss Huse has written Omaha friends and as a result Omaha alumnae members of Kappa Kappa Gamma are now busily engaged in making dolls and gayly colored scrapbooks for these Syrian children. As soon as the work is completed the boxes packed with picture books and dollies will be shipped to the waiting youngsters far across the sea.

Hamilton-Morris.
Miss Edith Morris, daughter of Mrs. B. J. Morris, became the bride of Forest Hamilton Thursday evening at an attractive home wedding. Edgar Morris of Laramie, Wyo., oldest brother of the bride, gave her in marriage. The Rev. W. E. Howard performed the ceremony before a bank of pink roses, palms and ferns.

Mrs. Howard Wood played the wedding march and Otto Lambert sang. He was accompanied by Mrs. J. Stimpson.

Miss Helen Morris, the bridesmaid, sister of the bride, wore a white satin. The gown had a bodice and puffed sleeves of gold lace. She carried a bouquet of lavender sweetpeas.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin, combined with princess lace and a beehive in the Morris hair. The tulle veil fell from a wreath of sweetpeas and the bridal bouquet was of white roses and a shower of white sweetpeas.

Clair Hamilton of La Junta, Colo., brother of the groom, was best man. John and Claude Morris, brothers of the bride, were ushers.

Mrs. Otto Lambert and Miss Edith Hensman assisted at the reception which followed the ceremony. The bride's traveling suit was of tulle broadcloth with hat to match.

Following a short honeymoon trip the couple will be at home after March 15 at 2717 Crown Point avenue.

National Worker Gives Views On Americanization

A. Amy Spalding, national field worker in the Americanization department, W. C. T. U., is in Omaha. She has given the following statement of ideas to The Bee:

Of all problems before the minds of the American people today that of Americanization should rightfully hold a very large place. This is necessarily so because it involves the maintenance of the standards of our home line and the moral status of our future citizenship.

A nation cannot experience the influx of a large percentage of people whose standards of sanitation, hygiene and education are somewhat inferior, without suffering very materially. Neither can that nation who felt its responsibility several years ago in fighting for the peace and democracy of all nations of the world, forget its responsibility to the representatives of those same nations who live within our borders.

And again, the individuals of such a democracy cannot shift their personal responsibility to such individual neighbors, because they are the units of a government of the people, by the people and for the people. When we realize that in America 35 per cent of our 110,000,000 population are of foreign stock and only 54 per cent of native parentage, and 10 per cent cannot speak the English language, we realize that we have a problem before us which is going to require the co-operation and combined effort of every organization and individual for its solution. There are many methods of attack in such a situation, but the writer would like to cite the precedent established by Detroit, the first city in the United States to combine under the Chamber of Commerce all agencies for Americanization work.

In 1914 the Boy Scouts gave out in over a hundred churches 30,000 hand bills, printed in seven languages, advertising the opportunities offered by evening schools and libraries.

Six hundred window cards were placed in the store windows by school children.

Eight hundred maps showing evening schools were posted in prominent places.

Thirty large companies' statements urging education.

One hundred and seventy-five letters to factories asking for co-operation.

A mass meeting of 9,000 foreign born men who immediately took out their first papers.

Publicity, the foreign press was also used.

In 1917 a federation of all the women's organizations was formed under the direction of the Chamber of Commerce to co-operate with the schools. A certain amount of territory was assigned to each organization and they did follow up work for the schools and home teaching.

Also a federation of all the protestant churches was organized, and the territory of the foreign districts in Detroit was divided proportionately among these churches for the purpose of home missionary work. Thus every district of foreign born people in Detroit was provided for, both educationally and spiritually, and it is to be hoped that many more of our cities in the United States will launch a similar program.

The W. C. T. U. is launching a campaign along that important phase of the work, emphasized by our national superintendent of education, Mr. Clayton, when he said: "No matter what is done by education, legislation, or any other means, Americanization will never be accomplished until the mothers of our homes are reached." Unless the foreign born parent is reached, the children become Americanized in a superficial way. They become ashamed of their homes and parents, become the dictators in the homes, and thus, losing respect for the authority of the home, they will not respect the laws of our nation.
