During the past week the New York league gave an extensive entertainment at the Waldorf Astoria. It was called "Musical Chairs." In this production various periods of music were illustrated by song and dance and there was considerable variety, as the author has gone as far back as Early English and Renaissance periods and also the Chinese. One attractive dance in the first part represented a game of blind man's buff, the participants being costumed according to the Louis XV period, and a modern dance illustrated a foot ball match. There also was a cowboys' dance. Most of the season's New York debutantes had roles.

Entering California Conservatory

Miss Pearl Klingbeil Will Study Music in West.

Spring days are calling many away from us to east and west and not a few are going west to greet the summer season. Miss Pearl Klingbeil left Thursday morning for San Francisco, where she will enter the Conservatory of Music there on Monday, March 7. On her trip, this Omaha girl was accompanied by Miss Virginia Halpine and her father, G. L. Klingbeil. Miss Halpine will be in San Francisco for several weeks, later on going to points in southern California, where she will remain for several months. Mr. Klingbeil will return to Omaha about April 1.

Mrs. Klingbeil and Miss Ruby Klingbeil may go west in June. In this event, the three will remain on the coast until the fall. Miss Klingbeil will probably remain away from Omaha for some time, as her studies at the conservatory will not be completed for two years.

Fund for Wellesley

Mrs. Ralph W. Kiewit, graduate of Wellesley college, 1912, is treasurer for the district organization for the alma mater. The quota for Omaha is $6,000. The district comprises Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa. Mrs. C. E. Burton of Omaha is district chairman.

The Wellesleyans of Omaha are expecting Prof. Hamilton McDougall here March 29 or 30, when he will probably give an organ recital. Professor McDougall is a composer of sacred music and has a choir of 40 girls at the college.

A Party Lantern.
Next time you can get hold of a cardboard jar or carton scrub it thoroughly with warm (not hot) water till it is quite clean. Then cut away two big round pieces on either side of the jar. Ordinarily colored paper, grased, will do, but it is not so nice. Make three little holes at the top of the carton, pass narrow strands of wire or string through them, and twist the ends into a loop. Put a small candle in the bottom of the lantern, then you can light it and hang the whole thing up by the loop. It is delightful for a party decoration.

Two hundred British girls are now on their way to New Zealand, where they expect to secure husbands.

Affairs to Honor Fort Crook Guest

An interesting visitor who comes to Omaha next week is Mary Jordan, the contralto, who arrives Monday to spend three days with her husband, Major Charles C. Cresson, at Fort Crook. With Miss Jordan will be her accompanist, Miss Stella Barnard, and her violinist, Sam Gardner.

A number of affairs are planned by the army set to honor this guest at the post. General and Mrs. Omar Bundy will entertain at luncheon for Mrs. Cresson during her stay. The date for this affair has not been set. A luncheon will be given Tuesday by Mrs. Arthur Wells, following which the honor guest will attend the weekly bridge party at Fort Crook.

Colonel and Mrs. Henry Page will entertain at dinner at their quarters Tuesday evening and Captain and Mrs. W. F. Frechoff will give a party at the Wednesday evening dinner-dance at the Athletic club for Major Cresson and his charming wife. From Omaha this singer will go to San Antonio, Tex., and then to New York City. It is possible that Miss Jordan may return to Omaha later in the spring to give a concert. She was heard here in the fall at the convention of the state teachers.

Among press notices which this singer has received, one from the Dispatch at Douglas, Ariz., on February 11, is particularly interesting: "It was not only the beautiful voice of Miss Jordan that earned her voluminous applause last night. From her deep, rich tones to her high, clear notes, Miss Jordan's voice is surpassed by none, but she possesses that, without which, no singer can possibly attain the top of her profession—personality. From the moment she walked to the center of the stage to sing her opening number, her smile had captured the hearts of her audience. She found further favor when she explained her second group of songs, which she sung in Russian, French and Norwegian. Even had she not told the story of them, her interpretation was so realistic that one could almost understand the words."

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Longing to be Admired.
Dear Miss Fairfax: I am 23 and considered intelligent by both business and social acquaintances, and it is thought among my friends that I have hosts of male admirers. When I tell them I am not going about with any one they laugh and won't believe me, and yet it is the gospel truth that I have never been asked to go out with any of the opposite sex, except once, with a man who seemed to admire my qualities, but he was old enough to be my father. I am the main support of a household without a father, and at times I feel blue to think that I, a girl of good education and good breeding, should always have to be a "wall-flower" while the painted up dolls with silly talk are having a good time.

Of course there are so many worthwhile things to do and think about just now, but in this not a momentous question in the heart of every girl? And while I am only 23, yet I feel greatly hurt to think that I have not been given a chance.

A Selfish Mother.
Dear Miss Fairfax: My sweetheart and I, both aged 22, are deeply in love, but when he was a boy his mother made him promise he would never marry while she was alive.

My sweetheart has asked me to wait for him. Will you please give me your advice. My mother says I should give him up. MARGIE.

Your sweetheart must make his mother see that this promise cannot be kept except at the price of his happiness and his deepest love and respect for her. She must release him. A boy and a sentimental mother might drive a bargain like this in a moment of emotion and of wanting to feel that they belong to each other. But no sane woman can plan to hold a man to such a promise. It is inviting his anger and even his bitterest thoughts. For her own happiness as well as yours this foolish woman must let that boy out of his prison.

Daily Reader: I cannot inform you on the book you mention. Write to some book exchange like Brentano, New York, or McClurg & Co., Chicago.

So scarce are telephone girls in Tokio, Japan, that the telephone company there is now paying $1.50 for each girl recommended as an operator.

There's Authority for these Statements

From physicians, dietitians and nutrition experts the nation over come enthusiastic statements attesting the health-importance of prunes in the daily diet. If you would see how essential prunes are to your physical well-being, read these:

—and here, if you will, are two more enthusiastic statements that show what domestic scientists, chefs and culinary experts think of prunes—the finest, most versatile and most economical of all fruit-foods. Read them and judge for yourself:

"I believe I am conferring a lasting favor on my patients in urging a more liberal use of such natural food-medicines as prunes. They are rich in nutritive, laxative and mineral elements. This much is certain: there would be less indigestion, less constipation and the ills that follow in their train, if people ate more prunes."

"Whether used by themselves instead of fresh or preserved fruit, or as the basis of wondrous desserts, pastry and other dishes, prunes offer a tasteful and economical way of securing variety in the daily fare. The food value of a pound of dried fruit is, of course, much greater than the same quantity of fresh fruit. And, just now, when economy is such a factor to the housewife, the high food value of prunes places them among the reasonable [and always seasonable] articles of diet."

—from an eminent medical consultant whose advice on diet has helped countless patients to better health and longer life

—from a nationally-known domestic scientist to whom thousands of housewives look for practical help and kitchen-guidance

"The craving for sweets, exhibited in most children and many adults, is a natural demand on the part of the system for a needed food. In using dried fruit [such as prunes] we obtain not only the nutritive value of the sugar, but whatever other hygienic or medicinal value they may have by virtue of the salts and organic acids found in them. Remember, too, that prunes especially are rich in tonic iron."

"It is high time that prunes came in for their 'just desserts.' Prunes will occupy a more important place on hotel menus from now on—and I, for one, am glad of it. They are a good, natural food, to begin with; easy to handle in the kitchen, and adaptable to a wide range of uses."
